

Consolidation said failure

Washington (AP) — The public school consolidation movement which has largely eliminated the one room schoolhouse in rural America has failed to produce expected financial savings and educational quality according to a study for the National Institute of Education.

The study prepared by Jonathon P. Sher and Rachel B. Tompkins found the newer larger regional schools cost as much or more to run as the old decentralized rural school systems did. And they say evidence indicates the children receive no better education.

The study called the consolidation of rural schools and school districts the most successfully implemented educational policy of the past 30 years.

The report published by the National Institute of Education, the government's education think tank, said consolidation proved popular because it promised rural people economies of scale, modernization, better teachers, more courses and better opportunities for children.

Consolidation represented a reform of enormous potential for solving most of the problems long considered endemic to rural education, the authors said.

But even with all their spending and all their new resources, rural people still did not generally receive that which they wanted most dearly — better life chances for their children, the report said.

Those changes are more affected by the education and income of parents, the social and economic character of the community, the investment of time, energy and love by many adults, and plain luck than they ever are (or were) by the size, newness or variety of the local school.

Figures compiled by the U.S. Office of Education document the trend toward consolidation.

In 1930 there were 149,000 single teacher elementary schools in the United States. Twenty years later that number had declined to 60,000 and in 1972 there were only 147, such schools left.

More than 70 per cent of all elementary schools were abolished during the same period, and the number of traditional four-year high schools was halved while secondary school enrollment tripled.

The study found there were apparent savings that resulted from improved administrative efficiency. But the authors say the savings often have been offset by some higher costs in other areas.

The authors devised a hypothetical case based on a study of Iowa high schools. In the hypothetical, three rural high schools of 140 pupils each were replaced by one new 420 pupil school.

In the old, small schools, total professional personnel costs were $198,000. But in the new consolidated school, personnel costs amounted to $167,000, a savings of $31,000.

This saving, however, ignores several critical economic factors, the study said. First of all, higher transportation costs are involved in busing students to the centrally located schools.

Furthermore, larger schools attract more specialized teachers and administrators, the study said. And they demand higher salaries.

In addition, transportation and equipment costs also go up in the larger consolidated school, the report said. At the same time, student-teacher ratios go up to cut costs.

The authors say there is no evidence to support the argument that consolidation has improved the quality of education.

The authors cite a recent study of high schools in Vermont, the most rural state in the nation, as evidence that bigger is not necessarily better.

The small high schools (in Vermont) appear to be performing every bit as well as their larger counterparts on the one available output measure — percentage of graduates entering college, the study said.

And none of the recent studies that measure student achievement independent of IQ and social class records a consistent positive correlation between size and achievement.

Florida Senate nixes ERA

Tallahassee, Fla. (UPI) — The Florida Senate, despite the lobbying of President Carter and Vice President Mondale, rejected the Equal Rights Amendment Wednesday — stalling the ERA for two years and casting doubt the proposal will become the Constitution's 27th Amendment.

The 21-19 senate vote was the second Southern setback the amendment has suffered this year, and proponents conceded they have no prospect of adding a state to the current list of 30 until North Carolina — which turned down the ERA this year — reconvenes its legislature in early 1979. By then, some will be critically short for the ERA, which has seven years from its March 22, 1972, passage by Congress in which to win 38 states.

ERA is going to be ratified, pleaded Sen. Lori Wilson, a Cocoa Beach independent who has futilely sponsored the amendment since 1973. "So let's — just one time — let it be because of the South, not in spite of us."

Gov. Reubin Askew called it a "deep disappointment." Askew, like Carter and Mondale, had personally contacted wavering senators with a plea to send the ERA to the house, where it was assured passage by a comfortable margin. Women have waited far too long for the equality which is rightfully theirs, he said. And they must continue to wait.

Sen. Alan Trask of Fort Meade, a former pro-ERA Democrat who was ousted by the gay rights controversy in Miami, read Bible verses expressing divine condemnation of homosexuality.

"We must never pass a law that is contrary to the teachings of God," said Trask.

It was nice to get a letter from President Carter, said Sen. Phil Lewis of West Palm Beach, an ERA opponent. "I hope he will do with the letter I wrote him back what I did with his — put it in my scrapbook. But his interest is no different from anyone else's on this issue."

Although the ERA is pending in the South Carolina Senate, proponents have no hope of getting it ratified by that state. Georgia shelved it in committee this year prior to the North Carolina defeat, and it has also been killed by Nevada, Virginia, Missouri and Oklahoma. Indiana is the only state ratifying the ERA this year.

Prospects for 1979 appear doubtful for ERA supporters, because some state legislatures in non-ratifying states do not convene until after the March 22 expiration of the seven-year limit.

Sheila Greenwald, an official of ERAmerica in Washington, said the proposal died in Florida because of a tremendous political fight going on between the conservatives and moderates.

National ERAmerica spokesman Bill Herrington, who sat through the debate, said the only chance now is to defeat legislators who voted against it. He said the target states will be North Carolina, Nevada and Florida.

Among others campaigning for the amendment in Florida was women's lib activist Betty Friedman.

The issue of homosexual marriages being legalized by the ERA had been raised in past debates, but apparently gained emphasis with the controversy over a proposed Miami city ordinance forbidding discrimination against homosexuals. Some gay rights activists contended that the city law was irrelevant because they would get all the same rights once the ERA is inserted into the Constitution.

Trask and Sen. Ralph Poston of Miami, another former proponent, cited the homosexuality argument in switching their votes.

LES: Energy crisis for real

By Bob Schrepf
Star Staff Writer

Concerned that the public believes there is no energy crisis, Lincoln Electric System officials met with officeholders, candidates and media representatives Wednesday night to discuss energy conservation measures.

Adequate local supplies of gas and electricity for home heating and air-conditioning have lulled the public into believing there is no crisis, it was suggested.

And a public irritated over rate increases may have failed to identify the real problem, the endangered supply of vital resources over the long run.

Energy conservation and research activities undertaken by LES since the 1973 oil embargo were recounted by staff members prompting Administrator Walter Canney to observe:

"Many of our efforts have gone unnoticed, and even if they were noticed there is no assurance people have a commitment to conservation."

The problem, according to LES officials, is in getting the message out.

Mayor Helen Bosausis, City Council members and candidates for office were also guests at the unusual dinner meeting which initially was billed as a forum for an exchange between LES staff and board members and the media of ideas on how to push energy conservation.

The meeting was held one week prior to the announcement of President Carter's energy program, a program which several participants predicted will shock people into an awareness of the energy situation and which will push utilities into the promotion of conservation rather than consumption of energy.

The promotion of conservation, Canney pointedly noted, is not a new concept at LES.

One reason behind public apathy might be government's setting a poor example, a number of people pointed out. Excessively bright street lighting on Superior Ave. and J St. was used to illustrate the point.

Councilman Bob Sikva said the public will not make substantial investments in conservation equipment and practices unless government leads the way. Private enterprise, which is not given the credit it should get, can provide the tools to conserve energy, if people will use them, he said.

Among the steps suggested to increase public awareness of the need to conserve energy:

- Stricter conservation practices employed by government.
- A more substantial information program, LES and what perhaps a larger budget for promotion as well as for the LES conservation program and media.
- Summing up all conservation efforts and a public review.

$50 rebate request to be withdrawn

(c) New York Times

Washington — President Carter has decided to withdraw his request to the Congress for a $50 tax rebate for most American taxpayers, informed administration sources said Wednesday night.

They said Carter had decided, after several days of debate among his economic advisers, to withdraw the request because key economic indicators were pointing up.

In addition, however, the proposal had run into opposition in Congress strong enough to make passage doubtful.

The strongest advocates of withdrawing the proposed rebate plan were Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal and Bert Lance, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Although it was not known precisely which indicators caused Carter and his advisers to turn around on the rebate proposal, they presumably included reports of strong retail sales in March.

Employment was also up slightly, with a fall in the number of discouraged workers — those who think they cannot find a job.

Exon wants program for mentally ill maintained

Associated Press

After meeting with three senators from northeastern Nebraska, Gov. J. James Exon says he wants the Norfolk Regional Center to operate more efficiently, but wants to make sure a current program for mentally ill patients is not destroyed.

Exon met Wednesday with Sen. Keith Boughn of Norfolk, Elroy Helmer of Coleridge and John DeCamp of Neligh, along with several employees of the center and officials from the Department of Public Institutions.

Senators and personnel from the center had opposed a proposal to move some 40 patients from one building to the center's main building. The old building would be closed.

The patients to be transferred did not belong in an acute psychiatric ward but could not function in a nursing home, said JoAnn Story, supervisor of the building the patients are now in.

Mrs. Story told Exon that the Department of Public Institutions had planned to move the patients involved into various wards, effectively destroying the program they are now involved in.

At the close of the 90-minute meeting, Exon said he did not want the patients moved until he receives a report on how they can be kept together in one area of the new building while receiving the same level of care available in the building that is to be closed.

"I don't want that building closed. I don't want those people moved unless we can properly account for them," Exon said.

Boughn, DeCamp and Helmer indicated they were pleased with Exon's decision. "I think the governor frankly may have been given misinformation previously," DeCamp said. His response was "100 percent appropriate" to what we wanted.

"I just reassured Boughn said. The administration took the facts we gave him and acted on them."

Dr. Klaus Hartmann, director of medical services at DPI, said he felt space needed for the program could be found in the newer building. He said he considered Exon's comment a direct order to preserve the program.

Exon said closing the old building and moving the program to the main building would be more efficient, less costly and would provide a better facility. But he emphasized the program must be preserved.

Last month the three senators met with DPI chief Jack Cleavenger after learning of the plan to close the building the patients are now in to move them to the center's main building.

Mrs. Story told Exon the program would have been destroyed because the patients involved would be distributed in various wards.

If that's the way it was, I don't think that's good, Exon said.

DeCamp said his concern was not whether the old building would be closed, but simply that the program be maintained.

Hartmann told the group on several reasons that he believed the program could be transferred to the new building.

Construction sites will be shut

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

At least 10 major construction sites in Lincoln will be shut down Thursday as a result of a labor dispute between area contractors and building trades unions.

Dean Kratz, Omaha attorney for the Building Construction Employers Association, said the builders will shut down projects because of the damaging economic possibilities of whipsaw picketing.

Whipsaw picketing is the practice of moving pickets around to selective sites, stopping work on one project one day, then shutting down another site another day.

The Laborers Union Local 1140 set up pickets on four sites earlier this week over a contract dispute and other unions have refused to cross the lines. A contract between the builders and eight trades unions expired April 1. A federal mediator will begin negotiations between the union and the contractors Thursday morning.

Projects which will be shut down by the contractors include State Fairgrounds Grandstands, the Bennett Martin Library addition, Plus X High School addition, the Molex connector plant at the Union Pacific industrial site, Duncan Aviation and part of the O Street beautification project.

The sites previously closed by picketers are the Atrium Sartor-Hamann Jewelry store, Commercial Federal offices at 16th and South and the Lincoln Housing Authority at 57th and R.

Contractors also said they would stop work on other minor projects.

Kratz said the stoppage would be a temporary shutdown and could not speculate on how long it would last since talks were scheduled for Thursday.

Because of the whipsaw tactics of the picketers and the possibility that they will move to another site, the members of the BCEA will be shutting down their projects, Kratz said.

He said the uncertainty of whether or not a site will be picketed from one day to the next made construction economical infeasible.

The building contractors offered the unions a $1.20 an hour pay increase spread over a three-year period. Union officials have indicated they were more interested in fringe benefits than raises.

The unions involved are the bricklayers, carpenters, cement masons, laborers, lathers, operating engineers, painters and plasterers.

Wages for the workers ranged between $7.21 and $9.24 an hour.

The contractors filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board Tuesday, charging that two unions refused to submit the contract offer to the membership as promised.

Boughn and DeCamp both said they thought the original DPI plan would have the best results. They said the program but that Exon's decision after talking with them Wednesday could prevent that.

The meeting was cordial, but one point Exon refused to negotiate on, namely, moved by Boughn and Helmer who said the plan Exon was trying to close the regional center.

Yousa said he was closing down. When he did, he said, the plan was to close Boughn.

Boughn said that based on the information he had, it appeared to him that DPI was in a bind, closing the old building and building a new one.

Exon noted that the center is a major part of the center.

Helmer acknowledged that he was not at the meeting that Exon attended.

Villagers take Haley as their own

By John Darnton
(c) New York Times
Juffure, The Gambia — It may well be that Alex Haley is not a descendant of Kunta Kinte after all, but that scarcely matters to the 100 or so people of Juffure, who scratch a meager living out of the soil near the "Kamby Bolongo," the Gambian River.

Clearly, the villagers of Juffure have taken the black American author of "Roots" as one of their own. And just as clearly, they eagerly expect him to adopt them — in the way of any African son who leaves the family compound to make it big in the distant city and return one day as a benefactor.

"We need Alex," said Binta Kinte, one of dozens here who bear the now famous family name. She was dressed in the flowing blue-print gown called a "robo," the red head-tie and the tiny gold earrings that she dons to greet the ever-increasing stream of foreign visitors.

"All the people who come here — that never happened before. It is through knowing of Alex," she said in sonorous Mandinka, rendered stiff in translation. "They will help us."

Juffure looks like hundreds of remote, impoverished African villages. Only three or four of the larger huts, built of hand-packed bricks, have corrugated tin roofs — a sign of relative affluence throughout the continent. Most roofs are made of thatched straw, which is not strong enough to keep out the pounding rains that will arrive in three months.

Scrawny chickens dart along the twisting pathways, dashing in and out of the huts, pecking the dust for grubs. Several donkeys stand listlessly under shaded lean-tos.

In the afternoons, when the sun beats down mercilessly and the hawks ride the circling air currents high above the 100-foot baobab trees, life stops. The men return from the peanut fields, the women stop pounding millet. Only the children are still active, kicking up dust as they wrestle one another to the ground and race around the huts, the walls of which are made of woven elephant grass.

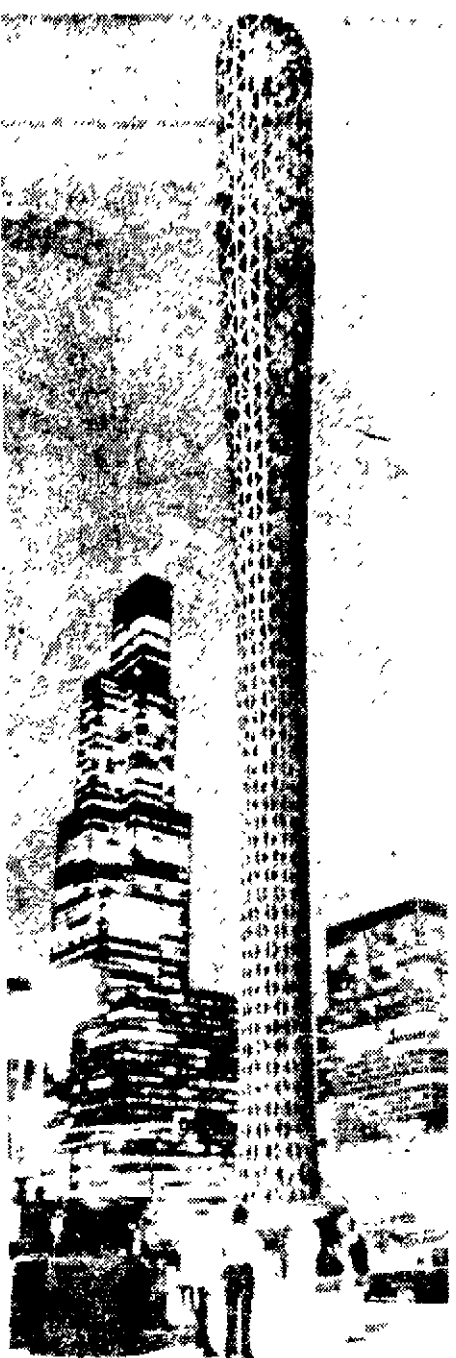

President Dawda Jawara has declared Juffure a national monument. Nobody here is sure what that means, except that a plaque will go up on the outside of the Kinte compound which, they tell visitors, is probably not too far from the one where Kunta Kinte himself grew up. It cannot be the same one, since the huts have a life expectancy of only 13 years and, in fact, the village has moved from the spot it occupied two centuries ago.

Fame has not yet had a real impact. But there is a sense, just beginning, that something indeed has happened — that life, perhaps, may change.

"That will be good," said Noemba Taal, a village elder. "We are too poor. The black Americans will help us because they are the same as us. And the whites will pity us because we are poor and they will give to us. Alex told us not to beg. So we must wait for them to give of their own will."

What was needed, they said, was modern machinery to work the fields in place of hand-held hoes, a dispensary to distribute medicines that are now almost totally unavailable, and perhaps some day even a hospital.

The symbol of change is the visitors. Mysteriously, they began appearing several months ago. At first there were only one or two. But now sometimes a full boatload of six and seven persons comes chugging up the river to dock at the perilous jetty in the next-door river village of Albreda to make a half-mile trek through the towering cottonwood, mango and orange trees.

Kansas City museum exhibits Indian art

Kansas City, Mo. (AP) — More than 3,000 years of Indian art has been brought together from museums in Europe and America for a special exhibit that opened at the Nelson Gallery here Wednesday.

The 850 articles, dating from 1500 B.C. to the 20th century, are a monument to the delicate artistry of the people who came to America thousands of years before European colonization.

The exhibit's title, "Sacred Circles," comes from the circular theme in Indian art, representing the unity of man's position in the world and universe.

From the Plains Indians who lived in middle section of the United States comes a leaping wooden horse on loan from the Robinson Museum in Pierre, S.D.

The show was the passion of one man, Ralph T. Coe, director of the Nelson Gallery, who searched for five years across the United States and Europe to bring together the encyclopedic presentation of American Indian culture.

No. 1 complaint is stray animal

Associated Press

Cities are beginning to pay more attention to what, surprisingly, is their residents' No. 1 complaint — the stray dogs and cats that are increasingly in control of streets and alleyways.

There are about 25 million stray dogs and cats roaming the nation's cities, estimates Friends of Animals, Inc., a nationwide volunteer agency. Between four million and six million of them are destroyed each year.

Americans have about 23 million pet dogs and 27 million pet cats, the agency said, but unwanted pets can become strays. Or the pet might have a litter of puppies or kittens for which owners can't be found, so the young animals are left to their own devices.

Streetwise strays often collect in the packs of five or six that are familiar sights in rundown urban areas, as well in some rural areas where they are blamed for killing livestock and wildlife.

Friends of Animals has just finished a survey of how 41 cities handle stray animals. The group said Wednesday that these cities spent a total of $13.9 million last year to round up and kill strays. Chicago, for instance, spends $1 million a year for animal control.

The problem has become so severe in some places that Pittsburgh residents, for example, say that fear of being bitten by a pack of dogs is as much a reason for staying away from certain sections of town as fear of being robbed.

An earlier survey of 1,031 city mayors and councilmen, conducted by the National League of Cities, showed that city residents complain about the stray animal problem more than any other. Sixty-one per cent of the mayors responding said it was the biggest gripe in their city far ahead of the second biggest source of complaint, traffic control, which 40.7 per cent cited as a major problem.

According to the American Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the average per capita expenditure for animal control in cities with populations over one million is 78 cents.

Dade County (Miami), Fla., with an estimated stray animal population of 130,000, spends $738,000 and destroys about 20,000 animals a year.

Most cities run their own animal control programs. Others allot tax money to local humane societies, or finance joint-city and private humane society programs.

New York City, usually among the biggest spenders for other programs, is the only large city that doesn't spend anything on animal control. The ASPCA has been left on its own to deal with New York's estimated 400,000 stray population. The group told city officials a week ago it needed $2.1 million to continue its work and threatened to give up unless city money was appropriated.

A few cities have begun programs to reduce the problem rather than just keep up with it. The model is Los Angeles, which runs three city subsidized clinics for spaying and neutering pets.

Jim McNamara, who administers the city's animal control program, says Los Angeles spends $2.7 million for the program, $340,000 of which goes to the clinics.

For operations for which a private veterinarian might charge $100, the city clinics spay females for $17.50 and neuter males for $11.50.

The result, says McNamara, is that the number of animals impounded has dropped by almost 30,000.

Generals give in — grudgingly

Madrid, Spain (UPI) — Spain's 18 top army generals in an unprecedented move censured Premier Adolfo Suarez for legalizing the Communist Party but grudgingly accepted his decision for 'patriotic' reasons, according to a document leaked Wednesday.

The army statement was regarded as a slap at Suarez and marked the first open clash since the death of Generalissimo Francisco Franco between the politically conservative army and the Suarez government which has been leading Spain toward democracy.

Despite the army criticism, Suarez is determined to return democracy to Spain and planned a cabinet meeting Friday to set a date for the first free elections in 41 years tentatively scheduled for June, government sources said.

Boogie-woogie at the Vatican

Vatican City (AP) — The frenetic notes of boogie-woogie, the jazz rhythm so popular in the 1940s, echoed in the vast Vatican audience hall Wednesday as Pope Paul VI was taken there in his portable throne for his weekly general audience.

The boogie-woogie was played by the band of the Benedictine Lycee of Einsiedeln, Switzerland, directed by a priest.

After his customary speech to a crowd of several thousand filling the hall, the Pope left the building — as at the start of the ceremony amidst the boogie-woogie notes, this time with the crowd joyfully joining with rhythmic clapping.

As he passed through the crowd the Pope smiled and waved.

Workers rally for apparel import lids

United Press International
An estimated 500,000 clothing and textile workers demonstrated coast-to-coast for tighter limits on apparel imports Wednesday while AFL-CIO President George Meany presented their case to President Carter.

Meany obtained no commitment from Carter. "He's given us a fair hearing, and indicated his mind is open," Meany told reporters after his meeting with the President.

Without stricter limitations imported apparel and textiles will make up 50% to 60% of the domestic market within the next decade, Meany said and he told Carter, and an industry employing 2.5 million will be on its way to extinction.

Meany said the meeting was not as bitter as a similar session last week in which AFL-CIO leaders complained about many administration policies, including Carter's free trade preferences. Carter previously refused labor's request for quotas on shoes and televisions.

"Today's meeting was a little calmer," Meany said. "We raised the temperature last week. We didn't have to raise it again today. He hasn't broken any promises because, frankly, he never made any."

Also attending the meeting were Vice President Walter Mondale; U.S. trade representative Robert Strauss; Sol Chaiken, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union; and Murray Finley, president of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union.

Chaiken said they told the President they strongly object to any administration officials who "use the word protectionist as if it were an epithet." He said the unions only want to save the domestic industry.

Finley said the dilemma facing Carter is "not a question of free trade or not free trade," because the apparel and textile trade already is governed by quotas. The unions simply want lower quotas.

Thousands of sewing machines and looms were idled when members of the nation's two biggest clothing and textile unions joined numerous rallies in 40 states, from New York's Herald Square to the steps of Los Angeles City Hall.

The walkout, which varied in length from several hours to a full day in different cities, was designed to point up the effect of import competition on American jobs. Employment in the domestic industry has fallen 30% since 1968.

The unions said they would "stand up and fight now" before their industry suffers as severely as domestic shoe and television manufacturers, who claim they are being wiped out by Carter's free trade policy.

While thousands of union workers jammed New York's Herald Square, Korean Commerce Minister Yie Joon Change told a news conference at the Plaza Hotel farther up town that the fate of American workers "is not my problem."

Soviet-bloc media step up propaganda

(c) New York Times
Vienna — The state-controlled newspapers and broadcasts in Eastern Europe are stepping up a campaign to depict Western societies, and especially the United States, as mercilessly exploitative.

In what appears to be a concerted drive, information media throughout the Soviet bloc are describing the Western world as an inferno for the working class because of mass unemployment, lack of job security, racial discrimination, the absence of health services and old-age care, and the arrogance of a tiny clique of capitalists who reap huge profits and wield enormous power.

"Some of the stuff we get from Prague, East Berlin and Sofia reads curiously dated — like Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels thundering about conditions in England more than 100 years ago," an analyst here commented.

He said the current denunciations of "Western capitalism," or "monopoly capitalism," at times with anti-Semitic overtones, were particularly strident in Czechoslovakia, East Germany and Bulgaria, less so in Poland and Romania, and rather perfunctory in Hungary.

Specialists on Eastern Europe here agree that the present barrage of attacks on Western social systems were coordinated at a conference of ideological experts from the central leadership of the Communist Parties in the Soviet Union and its allies in Eastern Europe that was held in Sofia, Bulgaria, March 2 and 3.

The closed-door parley at Sofia is understood to have discussed the problems of political dissidents in the countries represented. Another topic was strategy at the forthcoming Belgrade conference to monitor progress, if any, in East-West détente, it is reliably reported.

The Belgrade conference, due to start June 15, has been called to examine what has been achieved since 35 nations, including the United States and Canada, agreed on a code of conduct for East-West relations in Helsinki in summer 1975.

The Eastern bloc clearly expects to be the target of Western criticism in connection with dissident movements for more human and civil liberties in Communist-governed nations.

The Communist ideologists who took part in last month's Sofia conference appear to have decided to organize a vast propaganda effort to contend that "real" human rights — the right to work, to free medical care, to free education of children, and to old-age pensions — were guaranteed only by socialism.

The new drive to denounce shortcomings in the capitalist West started throughout the Soviet bloc about two weeks after the Sofia conference. The campaign is now in full swing, according to analysts here, who predict that it will culminate early in June.

The campaign is apparently aimed both at counteracting dissidence at home and at preparing a Communist position on human rights for the forthcoming Belgrade parley.

Tris out, but sleepwear flammability standards remain

Washington (AP) — Federal flammability standards for children's sleepwear are saving lives and continue in effect despite the banning of one chemical, Tris, used to make clothes fire-resistant.

Tris, which was banned last week by the Consumer Product Safety Commission after being linked to cancer, can be replaced by other means of making items flame-retardant.

But the basic standards for flame resistance remain in effect and commission officials say they have resulted in a major reduction in the number of children suffering burns.

The National Center for Health Statistics reported 27 deaths of children after their clothing caught fire in 1970, a commission spokesman said. By 1974, she said, this figure had dropped to seven.

She added that the severity of burns to children also has been declining, citing 10 cases from Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in New York, where doctors said the injuries would have been much more severe if the children had not worn flame-retardant sleepwear.

Federal standards requiring that children's sleepwear sizes 0 to 6X be flame-resistant took effect in 1973. Similar standards covering sizes 7 to 14 became effective two years later.

The Shriners Burns Institute in Boston treated 13 children for severe sleepwear-related burns in 1971 and 1972, and 10 each year in 1973 and 1974.

But as more of the flame-retardant sleepwear reached the market, this figure dropped to three in 1975 and one last year. No such injuries have been reported by the burn center this year.

The cases treated in 1975 involved hand-me-down sleepwear which had not been treated for flame-resistance, said Elizabeth McLoughlin, director of burn prevention at the institute.

She said the one 1976 case involved a flame-retardant garment and that the injury was relatively slight because the clothing did not flare up.

All of these cases, she noted, were incidents in which clothing was ignited from a source of flame. They do not involve cases in which a child was caught in a burning home.

However, she said there had been a few cases in which children injured in home fires had been somewhat protected by flame-retardant sleepwear.

In those incidents, she said, the children suffered burns of the face and hands, but the sleepwear protected the remainder of their bodies.

Although the banned chemical Tris was widely used as a flame-retardant in sleepwear, it can be replaced by other chemicals and it was not used in all items.

This was most commonly used in polyester, acetate and triacetate while it was unlikely to be used in modacrylic, cordelan, cotton and nylon.

The Tris ban will have a serious effect on manufacturers of the sleepwear, however, and they announced Wednesday that they have banded together to assist one another.

Termed Project Phoenix by the American Apparel Manufacturers Association, the group will unite to face the problems of funding new means of providing flame-retardancy and handling any necessary refunds to consumers.

Coors cans said unsafe

Los Angeles (AP) — Coors has been sued by a customer who claims he cut his finger when he tried to open one of the company's new press-top beer cans.

The class-action suit, filed in Superior Court by Glenn Greener of Woodland Hills, claims the cans are defective and unsafe.

Greener's suit asked for one-fourth of the net assets of the Adolph Coors Co. as punitive damages, along with medical expenses.

The new tops are pushed down into the can and replace the pull ring cans.

Black tag surprises senator

Salt Lake City (AP) — State Sen. Warren Pugh of Salt Lake City remembered it this way:

"I went in to my safe-deposit box and there was a black tag on it and I couldn't open it," the former Senate president said.

"I asked what the problem was and the teller said she would check."

"She came back and said I was dead," Pugh said.

"I've been accused of being dead from the neck up before, but as yet no one has tried to bury me," he said.

Long root or not, dandelions are no match for you now!

What makes dandelions so tough? It's their long, long roots. Some grow down as much as two feet into the soil. Digging or pulling them doesn't work, since you can't get all of the root. And the part that's left just sends up a new dandelion to take its place. That's why Scotts Turf Builder Plus 2 is so popular. It gets rid of the whole dandelion—root and all! plus forty other weeds. At the same time, Scotts Plus 2 thickens your lawn with a full feeding of Turf Builder fertilizer. So dandelions and other weeds fade away while your grass grows thicker and greener, filling in where the weeds used to be.

Tight-lipped 'mastermind' wins commutation

Gordon Liddy seemed to us to be a character out of romantic fiction, overly zealous, conspiratorial, selfless to a fault, slightly wacky, somewhat of a clown engaged in the unfunny business of tramping on people's rights.

In some respects he was the least dislikeable character associated with the Watergate break-in and coverup. Some sympathy attached to him because of his soldierly, closed-mouth attitude in the face of Judge Sirica's historic, savage attempts to get at the truth, and because he got a stiffer sentence than anybody else connected with Watergate. Many people felt other principals deserved harsher treatment than they received and than Liddy suffered.

Of late, columnists of various political persuasions have added their voices to a growing body of opinion that Liddy's stiff prison sentence was unjust by comparison and should be commuted.

President Carter did just that Tuesday, "in the interests of equity and fairness."

The commutation of Liddy's up-to-20-years sentence to eight years means that the "brains" behind the burglary of

Democratic Party national headquarters at the Watergate complex in June, 1972, will be eligible for parole in July after having served a total of 50 months — far longer than any other participant in the burglary or coverup has served.

Liddy's future is apparently uncertain, although it should be possible for him to make a living on the lecture circuit or through publishing his experiences, if he is of a mind to do that. Less likely would be a continued career in masterminding burglaries or intelligence operations. Based on his record, it is doubtful that even a banana republic dictator would hire Liddy to spy on the opposition.

But the important thing is that the interests of fairness have been served.

Carter was right in commuting Liddy's sentence. It was something President Ford, for political reasons, obviously had trouble doing. The same pressures do not apply to Carter.

Still in jail is John Ehrlichman, who wants to get it over with. Still out of jail are John Mitchell and H. R. Haldeman, who are appealing their sentences. The book is not yet complete.

Weak case against bet shops

The race track people have not stated a very convincing case in support of LB523, a bill which would outlaw messenger services which take bets to race tracks in the state.

So there is no misunderstanding: the service acts as a runner, not a bookie. It survives on a fee, not on a losing wager as bookies do.

Those favoring LB523 voice concern that messenger betting services will cut the handle, attendance and concession receipts at Nebraska tracks. They also suggest the service could be the breeding ground for criminal mischief.

On the contrary, we think betting messenger services could work just the other way: they could discourage criminal activity. The worst case example of messenger services in Illinois, where criminal or roughhouse activity apparently flourished, is not necessarily applicable here.

Also, services operating in Omaha and for a time in Lincoln have not put a noticeable dent in Fonner Park statistics.

Mostly, we think the service is a convenience for those people who place an occasional bet — or maybe more than an occasional bet — but who don't get out to the track often.

At least the tracks will see their money and everybody will get their cut except the bookie.

Properly monitored, the messenger betting services don't appear to have much potential for harm.

At the very least, the Legislature should agree to study the service rather than passing a bill to outlaw it.

Lincoln bucks downtown trend

The number of movie theaters in a downtown area is not an infallible test of its vitality. The number of screens may just tell something about the character of a downtown area and the population which inhabits and uses it.

The last picture show in downtown Des Moines will close soon because of lack of business, its owners said this week.

The Des Moines agent for the chain which operates the Galaxy Theater noted that "out downtown area has gone by the way of other downtown areas in other large cities where big downtown theaters have become a thing of the past."

Recent attempts to boost patronage at the Galaxy have failed, officials said.

Lincoln is not as big as Des Moines, but it is not radically different from Des Moines, either.

In Lincoln's compact downtown area can be found a number of theaters. We can't attest to their profitability, but they seem busy enough and they testify to the fact that whatever problems Lincoln Center may have, it is still more lively and healthy than the core areas of many of the nation's cities.

The university community bordering downtown of course is an economic shot in the arm for downtown theaters, restaurants, bars and shops.

But those same places get other clients, too, which points out that — some of its problems such as parking aside — downtown Lincoln is comparatively safe, attractive and has something to offer all kinds of people day and night.

Downtown's character is something worth preserving and enhancing.

'Do as I say . . .'

Washington — When Jimmy Carter the candidate got into one of his more righteous moods last year, he liked to inveigh against the evils of cronyism and fat-catism in the appointments of ambassadors. In doing so, he was only railing against a repeatedly demonstrated sin of nearly all presidents. But so vehement was his attack, and so categorical his insistence that such appointments be made strictly on merit, that he set himself up for particular criticism if he failed to be completely disinterested in his own selections.

That's why the names of Philip H. Alston Jr., a prominent Atlanta lawyer, and Anne Cox Chambers, chairman of the Atlanta Newspapers, stand out in the first list of 10 Carter nominees. Alston was named to be ambassador to Australia, Cox to Belgium. Both Atlantians were prominent givers to Carter's 1976 gubernatorial campaign.

The rest of the list was indeed peopled for the most part with individuals whose backgrounds seemed clearly to qualify them for the post to which they were named. That is not to say, of course, that Alston and Chambers are not qualified, but only to note that they did have the qualifications — friendship and financial support — that have distinguished so many appointees in the past and against which Carter spoke so strongly as a candidate.

Both Alston and Cox, as well as Gov. Patrick J. Lucey of Wisconsin, Carter's choice to be ambassador to Mexico, were recommended along with the rest by a presidential advisory commission. Its members included such foreign policy experts as former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, ambassadors Averell Harriman and William Scranton and such politicians as Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida, Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill of Massachusetts (son of the House speaker) and Alex Smith, a political right-hand man of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago. According to some members of the commission, the names were put before them from unspecified sources within the administration. According to one commission member, it was Rusk who made the case, though not by name, for his fellow Georgians, by emphasizing that many host countries are more interested in having an ambassador who knows the President personally than having an expert on their country in the post. "When things get heavy," this source said, "they want somebody who has the President's ear."

While recommending Alston and Cox among several names for Australia and Belgium, this same commission member said, the group did bypass a number of Carter friends and contributors because they were not deemed qualified.

In screening the list, commission members on occasion inquired whether a prospect had given money to the Carter campaign. But according to two participants, the fact that Cox had been one of Carter's largest 1970 givers — $26,500 from her and her husband — was not mentioned to the full commission. One member expressed surprise when told of it and said when the commission meets again, within the next month, he will ask about campaign contributions as a protection for the President. He said he was uncertain, had he known Alston and Cox were Carter contributors, whether he would have objected to them. "but I'll take it as a word of warning on future applicants."

The fact that Alston and Cox were recommended when it was not spelled out that they had given money to Carter is, of course, a point in their favor. Commission members said both received high marks on their abilities from Rusk and others who knew them.

On announcing his candidacy in December, 1974, Carter declared that all federal judges, diplomats and other major officials should be selected on a strict basis of merit. He can argue that the two Atlantians were picked on that basis, but there will always be doubters.

Still, Carter's innovation of a broad-based advisory commission is an improvement over the past practice of using a cash register to appraise the qualifications of most applicants. And in that regard, he also has an ally in the new federal campaign contribution limits. The maximum allowed, $1 - 000, wouldn't even buy the ambassadorship to Uganda.

Down to political play-offs

James Reston

Washington — About this time of year, at the changing of the seasons, you can look west in the evening from the Potomac and see the struggle of nature over the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia: spring trying to banish a savage winter, spectacular sunsets — clear and pink light streaming through the vast gray clouds.

Not even those cheery weathermen on television, with all their sliding charts and ambiguous predictions, know what the weather will bring tomorrow, and the changing political weather here is about the same.

The storm clouds are gathering over the White House and the Capitol building. Jimmy Carter's energy, trade, tax, welfare, farm, and public works policies are coming up for decision. He has defined his destination, but the Congress is now demanding a road map. In short, after a good season, the President is coming down to the political play-offs.

The evidence is clear all over this town. You can hardly hire a room in a good hotel here, even at outrageous prices, because the big business, labor, farm, conservation, disarmament, and other special interest lobbyists know that the first big test of the Carter administration is coming up — not only with him personally, but primarily with the Congress.

The Carter energy program, due in about a week, is the most dramatic case in point.

Almost everybody has been complaining around here that no president since the original Middle East oil embargo in Richard Nixon's days has given us a practical energy program, but if my information is correct, Jimmy Carter is going to come up with one that will startle the auto companies and unions, and produce a major debate within the nation and the Congress.

Carter's policy may not be as severe when it is finally announced as it sounds now. For, a lot of people are playing political and propaganda games with it — leaks about high taxes on gas, oil and big, wasteful cars, etc. — but, in the end, the Carter program is still likely to be very harsh.

It is interesting that the new President picked James Schlesinger as his energy chief. Politically, their records are very different, but philosophically they are very much the same. They are troubled by the slackness of American life, and want the American people to face up and shape up. Both of them are talking, not merely about a higher price of gas but a new austere way of American life.

So the first three months of President Carter's administration may have been very deceptive. The press has concentrated on his style, his language, his symbols, his news conferences, his television appearances, his family, his energy, and his down-home small-town manners. But the guess here is that there is something much more serious behind all this cosmetic politics.

His tactics and his timing may be wrong, but the way I hear it from his closest advisers, he is determined to conserve oil and gas (or make the people pay stiff taxes for wasteful alternatives), to make the Soviets face up to a serious disarmament program; to cut the export of U.S. military arms to the rest of the world; to fight George Meany and the rest of the protectionist labor leaders, and to defy the congressional leaders who insist on spending billions on public works programs Carter thinks are wasteful and unnecessary.

This may state the coming struggle for power between Carter and the political forces at home and abroad too starkly, but obviously a major confrontation is coming, and the first question is whether he can get the leaders of his own party — mainly Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, and Speaker Tip O'Neill of Massachusetts — to persuade the committee chairmen and other elders of the Congress to go with him.

They will go with him on the human rights and arms control controversy with the Soviets, even though they have doubts about his tactics, his timing, and his sudden diplomacy, but when they have to choose between the price of gas and Jimmy Carter, nobody here can guess what they'll do.

For the President is almost certainly going to suggest sacrifices that will infuriate both the auto manufacturers and the automobile unions, and propose a wholly different way of using and thinking about the automobile in America.

It will be some struggle, particularly since Carter is fighting on the Soviet front, the Middle Eastern front, the African front, the Cuban front, the Panama front and various other fronts at the same time.

In short, he has greatly increased his political capital, but now he has to spend it, particularly on his energy policy, and this could be critical in his relations with Congress for the rest of his years in office.

The clock zapped the TV

By LaVerna Hassler
Star Feature Writer

How lush and green the grass looks since the last snowfall. When the snow melted, it seemed the grass was just waiting to thrust the green spears toward the sun. Before the week is done we will be mowing the lawn. From now on, it will be one more task added to the busy new season.

When it comes to beautiful snowfalls, I don't believe I have ever seen an all-day snow of such huge feathery flakes as we had the first Sunday in April. Perhaps it seemed more lovely since the snow fell on a day in April at the end of the winter season rather than in early November at the beginning of winter.

I stepped outside when the downy flakes were falling thick and heavy . . . almost bumping into each other, and caught them on the sleeve of my sweater. They were so fragile. Due to the barely freezing temperatures, they melted almost instantly.

I looked over the low brick wall around the patio and was amused to see three purple hyacinths wearing snow-white hoods. The next day when the sky cleared for an hour or more, the snow melted from the flowers while a remaining snow cover on the ground nestled around them. It seemed April Fool's Day had hung around beyond its allotted time.

For some time now a strange thing has been happening to my aunt's and uncle's TV every time we drive up and park on their drive. Channel Five begins to flicker and the picture becomes blurred. In fact, before they see us coming, they surmise we are about to drive up by the reaction of their TV.

In fact, when we turned to Channel Five on our own TV, we also had interference but The Farmer suspected it was our antenna. A high wind this winter bent some of the arms.

However, when we again parked our car for a visit and the reception proved to go berserk, The Farmer decided to test the mysterious reaction. He got into the car and drove away from the house with the instructions for us to watch the reaction on the TV. He had gone less than a block from the house when the picture came in bright and clear.

Patchwork Prairie Country

As he again approached the house, the picture went into a tizzy.

The next day The Farmer purchased two new tires for our car. While the tires were being put on our car, he told the man at the auto service station about the mystery.

"I've never heard of it," he answered.

"I suspect the clock in our car. It's the only thing that continues to run when the motor is shut off," The Farmer volunteered.

The man did not seem to be convinced.

The Farmer asked the man to turn on his TV to Channel Five. Sure enough, the zigs and zags hopped all over the picture.

Kevin Phillips

Washington — Several years ago, in contrast to most people, I was indeed convinced that the next president of the United States would be an ex-Democratic governor of a major Southern state, a country boy who built his father's farm into a major agribusiness property, an ex-Navy man, a canny rural politician whose county seat displays a peanut statue on the courthouse lawn.

Thus isn't a boast. On the contrary, it was not until spring, 1976, well after the Iowa caucuses and the New Hampshire primary, that I saw any White House future for Jimmy Carter.

No, I was thinking about John Connally, secretary of the Navy under John Kennedy, three-term Democratic governor of Texas, born and raised in Wilson County, near San Antonio, where peanuts are the most profitable crop (and where the courthouse lawn boasts a six-foot high concrete replica of a peanut).

Well, the Democrat-turned-Republican John Connally didn't get to be president in 1976. But don't give up your Wilson County peanut sacks. He still might get there in 1980.

Admittedly, the odds are against him. Big Jawn is a talented man, but he comes on too strong — like Texas barbecue sauce, maybe — for the creamed chicken and watercress sandwich tastes of Northern Republican party leaders and for the free-market, Milton Friedman economics of conservative ideologues. And of course, there's his 1974 indictment. A lot of people (and a lot of Republicans) just don't like him.

Even so, I've been monitoring the press coverage of John Connally's first few weeks back on the political circuit. Gerald Ford, Ronald Reagan, Howard Baker . . . watch out! And Jimmy Carter, you better assign a staff man to watch Connally full-time. The presidency you save could be your own.

In late March, Connally went to speak to the Kennedy Institute of Politics in Cambridge, Massachusetts. According to a largely unfriendly Boston newspaper report, he was dynamite. "When he and Nellie (Connally) left, the Harvard cheerleaders A half dozen even stood on their chairs. Waves of adulation swept over him. A Texas television reporter once said of Connally, 'You'd buy a used car from that man. You'd buy one with no hood and no fenders, pay 12% interest over 60 months and think you'd been done a service.'"

Harvard was a seller's market when John Connally came to Cambridge. Texas is also a seller's market for its former governor. Appearing at the Houston

Connally . . . maybe in 1980

Press Club, Connally attacked the news industry as "big business," decrying its dangerous trend towards economic concentration and abuse of power. Applause was heavy, coverage of his speech was widespread, and one press report noted that "a number of those in the audience, which included many businessmen, responded with 'Amen.'"

On March 24, in Chicago, Connally called Washington office-holders "gutless," charging that "modern polling technicians have reduced politicians to sheep." It was a well-received speech, and the Chicago Tribune put the story on Page 8, but maybe the tall

Texan had a bit of an off-day. No reporter described his reception in terms of amens, enthusiasm or waves of adulation.

A day earlier, after winning an "enthusiastic" reception from a Petroleum Marketers convention in Columbus, Ohio, Connally outlined to reporters his blueprint for "revolutionary" changes in the U.S. government. He wants to limit the president to one six-year term. Senators to one eight-year term, congressmen to two four-year terms. He favors retiring judges at the age of 70, requiring federal judges to be reconfirmed every 10 years, and prohibiting deficit spending except in time of war or national emergency. As anti-Washington themes go, that's out-Cartering Carter.

So here's a prediction: John Connally, ex-Democrat, ex-poor boy, Southern political revivalist, Washington outsider, maybe be the only Republican who can beat Jimmy Carter in 1980. By then, we may prefer a return to zestful wheezing and dealing. We may be ready for real, even "revolutionary," structural reform of the federal government in lieu of sweaters, press releases and radio Dial-A-President charades. The South may even be looking for an ideological Southerner. If so, Mr. Charisma will be standing by — the big Peanut, not the Little Peanut — and at age 63, he could still go all the way.

Bermuda Triangle mysteries abound

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau
Fremont — The Bermuda Triangle, where ships and aircraft reportedly have vanished without a trace, hides another mystery, according to the bestselling author of the Triangle story.

Charles Berlitz said Wednesday that his most recent expedition into the area bounded roughly by Florida, Puerto Rico and Bermuda has found evidence of an ancient civilization.

In addition to roads and other structures, he said, there is a 500-foot pyramid on the Atlantic Ocean floor.

Preliminary tests indicate the "most astounding ruins" are at least 14,000 years old, Berlitz said.

In Fremont to speak at Midland Lutheran College, the author and scuba diver also said he expects a joint U.S.-Soviet investigation of the Bermuda Triangle to solve the disappearance mystery.

Calling the investigation "Project Polymode," Berlitz said the two nations have been investigating the area for about eight months.

"We'll find out what's going on in a fairly short time," Berlitz predicted. His book, "The Bermuda Triangle," spawned numerous similar works about the 100-plus ship and plane disappearances reported since 1945.

Berlitz theorizes that the disappearances are caused by "an electromagnetic force concentrated to a degree inconceivable to us."

Describing several incidents in the Triangle, Berlitz said a type of fog often envelopes ships and planes. He also said the Triangle can affect time.

A National Airlines 727 metliner was surrounded once by a fog for about 10 minutes, Berlitz said. During that time the plane vanished from radar screens that were tracking it.

When the plane landed in Miami, watches belonging to crew members and passengers had lost 10 minutes, Berlitz said.

He also described a personal encounter with a Triangle phenomenon.

Berlitz said that he and others once were aboard a ship in the Bermuda Triangle about 9:30 p.m. when a greenish cylinder about 15 feet long appeared behind their vessel. He also noticed a fog moving in.

The cylinder passed the ship, "broke surface, went up into the air, changed to an orange color and vanished."

As the cylinder passed the ship, Berlitz said, "the sonar and radar ceased to function, the engine stopped, the radio went out and the generator caught fire."

Critics of his book have said that most of the disappearances are due to natural forces. Bad weather, disoriented or lost pilots and the vastness of the ocean are often cited as explanations. Berlitz scoffs at such criticism.

In other areas of the world where many ships sink, he said, debris is found and the vessels are able to send radio messages.

But in the Triangle, radios fail and no trace is found of missing ships.

"I don't think it's natural for a big oil tanker to disappear without a splash of oil in the water," Berlitz said.

The author also said it is puzzling that some ships and planes disappear while many more do not, even though passing through the same area on identical courses.

"What's happening is not supernatural but supranatural," he said. "We'll find out it is something we're not familiar with but something that has an explanation."

Berlitz said many incidents do not result in disappearances. Currently, he is interviewing survivors of such experiences for a second book about the Bermuda Triangle.

Backyard wins foul ball shield

Papillion (AP) — The LaVista City Council voted Tuesday to spend about $1,800 for appurtenances, ramps and bastions to prevent foul balls from trespassing on Mrs. Josie Chapman's backyard, which borders the LaVista ball field.

Last month, Sarpy County District Court Judge George Stanley awarded Mrs. Chapman no damages, but ordered the city to put up necessary backstops and fences.

Moore's is dead

Marseilles, France (AP) — Nigel Moore, 40, son of Cecil Moore, the millionaire owner of Britain's Littlewoods football pool and mail-order empire, was killed in a car crash in southern France Saturday, police said.

Berlitz talks of Triangle encounters.

Panhandle's income growth leads state

United Press International
Personal income in the Nebraska Panhandle grew more rapidly from 1969 to 1974 than in any other region of the state, the director of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Bureau of Business Research said Wednesday.

Donald E. Pursell, writing in an article in the April edition of Business in Nebraska, said the growth of personal income in the Panhandle over the five-year span was 85%, compared with a 55% increase for the state and a 52% national growth.

Specifically, Pursell said, personal income in the Panhandle jumped from $262 million in 1969 to $524 million in 1974.

the UNL College of Business Administration compiled its Nebraska report with data prepared by the U.S. Department of Commerce's Bureau of Economic Analysis.

The leading sectors of income growth in the Panhandle were farm and manufacturing, Pursell said, adding the personal income increase was widely distributed across the region.

Farm income increased from $36 million in 1969 to $128 million in 1974, he said. The Panhandle was one of the few Nebraska regions where farm income in 1974 exceeded the 1973 peak year income.

Earnings from manufacturing in the Panhandle jumped from a 1969 level of $15.7 million to $35.7 million in 1974, he said.

In addition, Pursell said the largest gain in personal income was recorded in Banner County, where income increased 276% over the five-year period. Deuel County ranked second with a 117% hike in personal income, followed by Box Butte County with 115%, he said.

The increase in the largest Panhandle county, Scotts Bluff, was 81% in terms of dollar volume, Pursell said. Other increases in county personal income include Kimball, up 104%; Morrill, up 82%; Sheridan, up 64%; Dawes, up 76%; Cheyenne, up 82%; and Sioux, up 64%.

State arboretum sprouts preservation branches

During 1975 Arbor Day ceremonies at Arbor Lodge at Nebraska City, former University of Nebraska-Lincoln president D. B. Varner announced the university's commitment to assist in development of a Nebraska statewide arboretum.

Two years later, the Nebraska State Arboretum (NSA) is now a reality. The first two designated sites are the Maxwell Arboretum on the UNL East Campus and Arbor Lodge.

Six more sites are preparing for NSA site membership: Blair City Park, Chet Ager Nature Center, Pioneers and Wilderness Parks, Lincoln; Wayne State College Campus; and the Chadron State College Campus.

Plants are continually being destroyed to make room for city expansion and increased agricultural and industrial land needs, according to Jana Kattenhorn, arboretum associate at UNL. Awareness that already existing plant collections are a valuable asset to the human environment gives cause for their preservation, she said. Combining plant collections under the NSA heading will form the large, strong, speaking body needed for the preservation and maintenance of sites, she said.

Juvenile Attention Center application OKd

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

The Region II Crime Commission approved a grant application of $297,751 for the Juvenile Attention Center in Lincoln Wednesday.

According to County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton the grant will be used for the operating budget of the center, and represents a smaller figure than requested last year.

This budget has been closely scrutinized pared to the bone. Hamilton added. It represents a much-needed increase in staff, from 14 to 16 full-time employees, although the center originally wanted 19 staffers, he added.

The program has survived the most careful scrutiny from its peers, people competing for the same dollars the attention center wants, and the process has been thorough, complete and fair," he said.

Assistant Public Defender Paul Conley, chairman of the center board, told the commission that the staff is the most important part of the center. "We're dealing with young people in a very highly emotional state," he explained. "Most of them can't even be returned to their parents" while awaiting trial on various offenses, he added.

"We don't attempt to treat them. We can't. We merely have to hold them while they await their turn in the criminal justice system," Hamilton added.

County Attorney Ron Lahners, a commission member, asked if the center has attempted to coordinate its activity with Pat Rackers, the newly appointed city-county corrections coordinator.

Hamilton admitted that such coordination would be a logical move, but noted that Rackers has only been on the job for two weeks, "hardly enough time to coordinate anything."

Of the funds allocated, $89,325 will come from the federal government. The additional $208,426 comes from state and local sources.

The commission also approved a grant of $126,702 for two group homes operated by the Youth Service Systems.

Rackers and Lincoln banker Ellis Dann were officially welcomed as new members of the commission. Assistant Lincoln Police Chief Roger LaPage asked the commission to accept his resignation, and suggested the appointment of Police Chief Dean Leitner as an alternate.

LaPage, who was recently re-elected to a two-year seat on the commission, explained that police department reorganization was responsible for the requested changes. He said that he is now responsible for police operations, a position he feels would be incompatible with commission membership.

Goals of Region II Crime Commission outlined

The future role of the Region II Crime Commission just might change.

At least that's the feeling of members of the commission's planning committee, headed by Dr. R. L. Fredstrom. Fredstrom outlined the future, as his group sees it, for the 21 fellow members of the commission Wednesday.

Topping the list of ultimate goals is a complete study of the criminal justice system in Lincoln and Lancaster County, "a flow chart, if you will," Fredstrom said.

In the past we've concentrated on approving grants for the various members of the system, often without really knowing where and why they fit into the system," he added.

The study would "allow the commission to make a significant contribution to law enforcement," and would allow us "clarification and justification of our grant approval," he said.

"We could see where a person gets into the system, (by committing a crime) and follow them through the various agencies and courts, until justice is done," he added.

Fellow commission member John Alden agreed. "We need some logic behind our approvals. The crime commission acts as a source of approval and recommendation for law enforcement projects that use federal, state and local funds.

The whole thing will also let us see what part we might play in the life of the community, what needs exist and where," he added.

Member Marie Arnot suggested that various committees of the commission could help define specific areas of the flow chart, doing some of the necessary legwork involved.

The commission voted to accept Fredstrom's report and pursue the matter in detail in the future.

Veterans will continue getting monthly checks

Veterans receiving the GI Bill for education will continue to receive monthly payments, according to Jim Smith, director of the Veterans Administration office here.

It was incorrectly reported in the Wednesday edition of The Star that effective June 1, students receiving GI Bill benefits will be paid every two months, instead of monthly.

Last fall Congress passed legislation to eliminate the prepayment of GI Bill benefits to avoid overpayments to those who enroll, then drop out of classes, Smith explained.

June is the only month veterans will not receive a GI check. They will receive their last payment under the old system May 1. The June check will arrive early in July, Smith explained.

Girl Scouts set cookie record

The Homestead Girl Scout Council has completed its greatest cookie sale ever.

During the 1977 sale a record 125,400 boxes were sold up 25 3/4% over 1976. Since 1975, the sales have increased 53%.

Individual Girl Scout troops will receive at least 10 cents per box sold.

Top sellers were Kimberly Hartman of Lincoln, who sold 353 boxes, and Jeanne Mercer of Nebraska City with 302.

Air-conditioning work set for Vets' Hospital

A $3 million air-conditioning project for the Veterans Hospital in Lincoln was announced Wednesday by U.S. Rep. Charles Thone.

Thone reported that George H. Wentz, Inc., of Lincoln, is being awarded a contract for $3,131,903 from the Veterans Administration for work on the five buildings of the hospital complex.

Work on the project will begin May 1 with completion by December 1978, although some buildings will be getting cooler air by the summer of 1978, according to Thone.

The main hospital will be the first to be cooled by the central air conditioning unit. Also included in the project are the psychiatric unit, kitchen and engineering building, auditorium, administration building and the mental hygiene clinic.

Ancient Age.

Never settle for less.*

*Less proof that is.

Since several leading bourbons recently reduced their proof from 86 proof to 80, you may end up paying the same money you did when they were 86 proof.

Ancient Age could have lowered its proof too, but we didn't. We're a great tasting whiskey and a great value.

We figure you've been buying 86 proof bourbon for a good reason—you like it. Besides if you're going to pay for 86 proof why not get it.

When you buy Ancient Age you get what you pay for... 86 proof Kentucky Bourbon at its finest.

Boosalis firm bus believer

Despite the rising operating deficit of the Lincoln Transportation System, Mayor Helen Boosalis said Wednesday she wants to maintain LTS service.

The Lincoln Chamber of Commerce Wednesday asked that steps be taken to cut down the deficit, up 62% from last year to $488,533 for the first six months of the fiscal year.

Measures recommended by the chamber include a cost-cutting program, the elimination of unprofitable routes in combination with increasing service on profitable routes and increasing bus fares in stages.

The chamber said that operating revenues should cover at least 50% of operating costs. Presently about 35 to 40% of the costs are covered by operating revenue. Most of the deficit is paid by federal and state subsidies.

Questioned on the chamber's suggestion at her regular biweekly press conference, Mrs. Boosalis said with energy supplies dwindling rapidly she feels it is important for the city to have a public transportation system to provide an alternative.

Before she would support the elimination of any bus service, Mayor Boosalis said she would want to determine what other forms of transportation were available to the residents in a particular area.

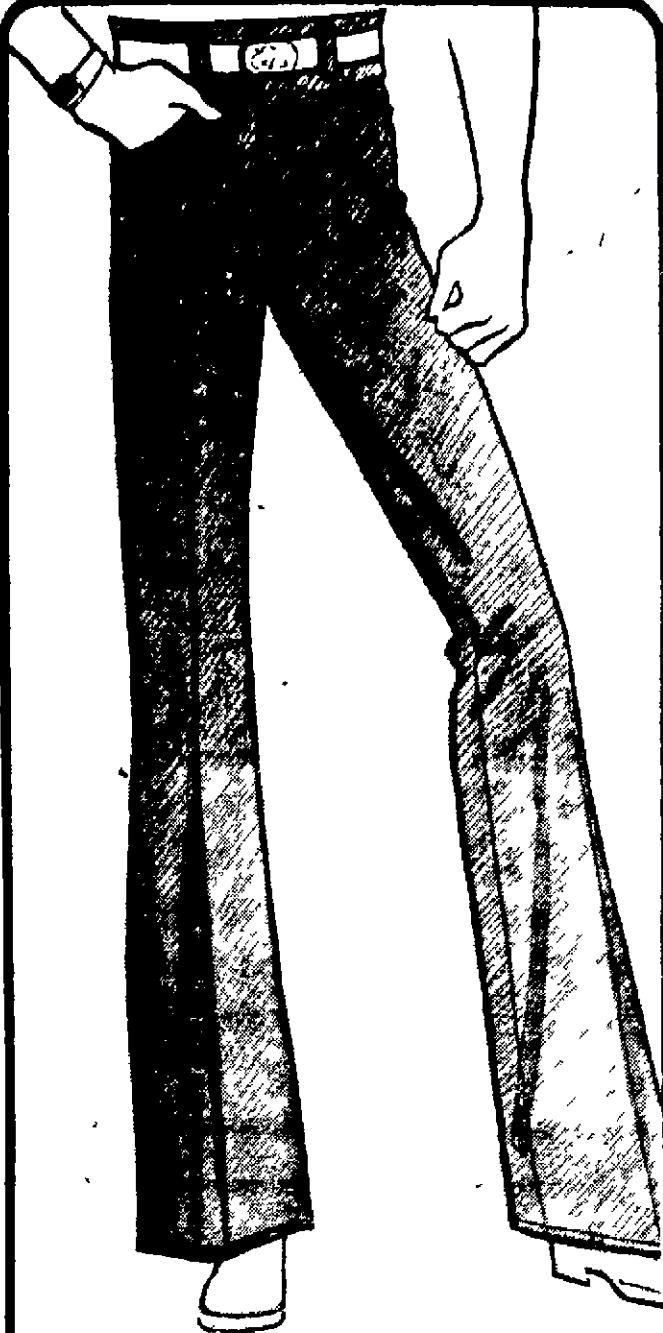

The use of bus advertising as one way of raising more revenue is not supported by the mayor. She said Wednesday that if certain types of advertising, such as for X-rated movies, liquor and cigarettes, are eliminated, the small amount of revenue involved would not be worthwhile.

One advertising firm has estimated the city might net about $15,000 a year if it permitted advertising.

LTS Manager Jim Donaghy said Wednesday he wanted to review the chamber's suggestions before responding in detail, but he felt the goal of 50% of the operating costs covered by operating revenue was realistic in some respects.

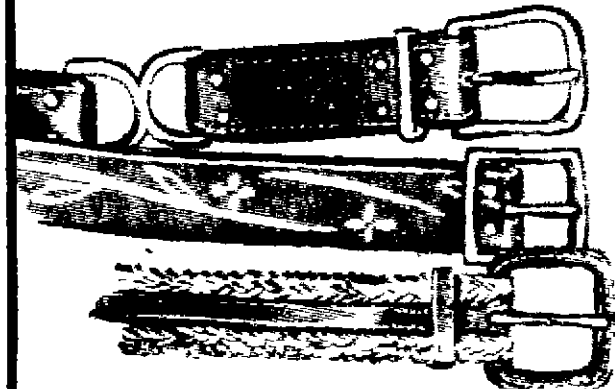

Statistics published last fall by the Urban Mass Transit Administration showed that at that time the nationwide average for operating revenue was about 46% of operating costs.

Donaghy said that LTS was near that figure last fall. He said he believes that other bus systems across the nation have experienced the same trend toward larger operating deficits.

Adventists build headquarters

The Central Union Conference (CUC) of Seventh Day Adventists is building a $2.25 million administration headquarters at 84th Street and Pioneers Boulevard to meet the demands of its membership growth.

Charles R. Beeler, CUC communications director, said the wood-and-masonry building is 38,000 square feet, is designed for growth and projected needs.

He said the growth rate for the five-state conference, which includes Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Wyoming, was near the top of the denomination's in 1976.

The building will house administration offices and youth and lay activities, education, Sabbath school, publishing, communications, stewardship and auditing departments.

Work on the new building began Sept. 20, 1976. About 30 persons who work for CUC will move into the new building not before late summer or early fall, it then, Beller said.

Architects of the building are Don R. Kirkman and Associates of Auburn, Wash. Almost all the subcontractors are being hired from the Lincoln area.

Former Nebraska newsman Gore dies

Fort Atkinson, Wis. (AP) — Leroy Gore, the country newspaper editor who gained national prominence with a campaign to recall Wisconsin Sen. Joseph McCarthy, died Wednesday at the age of 73.

Gore, who grew up in Audubon, Iowa, graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1928. He began his newspaper career in Wahoo (Neb.) and went to Wisconsin in 1935.

It was while he was editor and publisher of the Sauk Prairie Star in Sauk City that Gore campaigned to oust McCarthy, a Republican, who was later censured by his Senate colleagues.

Gore, a former Republican, became disillusioned with tactics McCarthy used to search for Communists in government. The 1954 "Joe Must Go" recall movement produced 330,000 signatures on recall petitions, short of the necessary 413,000.

Gore is survived by his widow, Grace, a son and a daughter. The body will be cremated and memorial services will be scheduled later.

Mayor proposes 3 for hospital board of trustees

Mayor Helen Boosalis Wednesday announced her selections for appointments to three Lincoln General Hospital board of trustees posts.

A University of Nebraska-Lincoln staff member for housing, Glen Schumann, was proposed by the mayor to replace longtime board member Herb Hopkins. Hopkins, who was first appointed to the board in 1962, is general counsel for Bankers Life, Nebraska.

Renominated to the board was David Calhoun, president of the Jacob North printing firm, who has served on the board since 1973.

Mrs. Rosemary Endacott, a Lincoln housewife, was selected to replace James E. LeRossignol, who submitted his resignation in February. LeRossignol is advertising director of the Journal Star Printing Co.

The term of Jerry Schiermeyer, former National Bank of Commerce president, has expired and he recently announced to the board his plans to return to his hometown of Fremont. However, Schiermeyer, who has served four years, has agreed to remain on the board until he leaves Lincoln.

All nominations by the mayor are subject to City Council confirmation. The council must also select one of its members to fill the expired term of Councilman John Robinson. The hospital board has recommended that Robinson be renamed to that position.

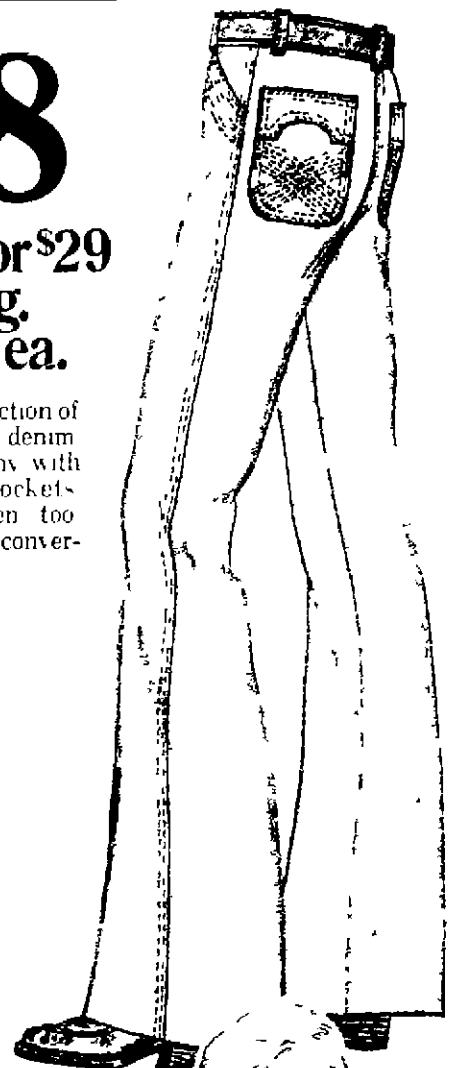

Each year, four trustees are appointed for three-year terms.

Bovee sings of justice, freedom

by
Deb
Gray

Photos
by Frank
Varga

An anarchist, he doesn't see much good in government

One more song to sing

When I'm gone
They'll talk about my singing when I'm gone
I'll be in Heaven with my golden guitar ringing
Where there's a crowd on every corner
And a half that's always full — Streetsinger's Heaven — a song
by Bob Bovee and a few friends

Hallelujah. What a glorious hereafter, one that only performers such as Bob Bovee could envision, a league of angels emptying themselves of cash just to hear him sing one more chorus.

But before eternity pays its dividends, there is still one more show, another string of one night stands. God only knows where they will be, these future nights of singing to yet another crop of faces to expressions lost in wirey grandeur.

Bob Bovee recently performed at the Gas Light Theater.

Bovee, 31, was once a resident of Bellevue, Neb. He now calls Minneapolis home.

But his heart is buried in asphalt, in the stuff that takes him to one more bar, so he can strum his guitar, play his harmonica, sing the old songs.

As a youth, Bovee trained for a life of safety. He graduated from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. He once had what those who hate office-bound limits call a "day job."

But Bovee left this behind six years ago. He quit his job and took to the road, a Huck Finn traveling concrete rivers, his ear tuned to the murmur of an America that is dying, but not yet dead.

He says that his music is "tradition-oriented." He sings the tunes that were passed down from parent to child, generation to generation.

The values he sings about are important ones, he said, because they are being completely ignored by our youth.

His music is social commentary, a way to pass on messages he can't say any other way.

He sings of justice, of being free. But mostly he sings songs he feels are jeopardized by mass culture, songs such as "Old Joe Clark."

Bovee says he is an anarchist. "I feel government doesn't do much of anybody any good," he said.

He is a member of the Industrial Workers of the World, a union better known as the IWW, or Wobblies, the singiest union America ever had. The union, Bovee said, believes "the fruits of production should go to the people who produce it."

Bovee said he grew up in a family with no good musicians, but lots of music makers. His family filled him with the love of music and the knowledge that "I could make it myself."

'I've heard a lot of other singers. They may be virtuosos, but they are nothing really special. It's all from the head, not from the heart. It's not magical unless it comes from the heart.'

His grandparents played the old tunes, sang the old ballads, and when he was 18, Bovee started playing them too.

He first played banjo, something "I never did get very good at."

After banjo, he took up the autoharp. Then he learned to play harmonica. Then he learned how to play guitar licks by first playing them on the harmonica.

Bovee once had a bout with ambition. He wanted to be a veterinarian.

That, he tells you, was an illusion crumbling experience. He wanted to help animals, most of the others wanted a way to make money.

He switched camps, this time to history. He graduated from UNL in 1969 and found a day job.

He saved his money, and in 1970, he took off for Europe. He hung around coffeehouses, kicked around in Europe's folk underground, meeting other assorted wayfarers. In those coffeehouses, he met his destiny.

He returned to the states and worked in Portland for a few months. Then, in 1971, he took his songs to the road, and that is what he has been doing since. He travels for about three-fourths of the year, seeing the U.S.A. in his Volkswagen van.

Yeah, sometimes the traveling does get him down, he said. He often thinks about his girlfriend back in Minneapolis.

Sometimes I wish I could be like an amoeba and split myself up, he said.

He pays his bills from the money he takes in at gigs, from the contents of hats passed around at the door.

It isn't a life of certain security, but then again, Bovee isn't all that concerned about money. It's like oxygen, you need some of it to survive.

Bovee considers himself a free person, free because he isn't bridled by possessions. Too many people, he said, are interested in going home, switching on the tube, buying his and her snow mobiles, or whatever the newest gadget is, now days in the Jones one-upmanship racket.

Bovee considers himself musically a traditionalist. Some of the best music he has heard, he said, has been made in people's living rooms.

That's when the spirit triumphs, when the love of music means more than wrong notes or out of tune singing.

Bovee admits he is not a technical singer. Virtuosity is not his bag.

I've heard a lot of other singers, Bovee said. They may be virtuosos, but they are nothing really special. It's all from the head, not from the heart. It's not magical unless it comes from the heart.

Bovee decries the hucksterism of the music business. He and 10 other musical acts in Minneapolis banded together in 1972 to form the June Apple Musicians Co-op. The co-op books and manages members as an alternative to the hard sell of the music industry.

He takes his songs to labor sites, to fields worked by migrant farm workers. He sings about skid row, tearing down low rent housing in Denver and pushing pensioners out of their homes, and Bruce Diamond Mines, about the conditions in coal mines.

When Bovee was a youth, back in the 60s, he had the red-blooded ideals. But then he said he looked around at Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, the political assassinations of the Kennedys and Martin Luther King.

Then I looked and thought, "Who was Dwight Eisenhower? Who was Franklin Roosevelt?" I saw people perpetuating a system for the sake of saving themselves.

When will the people be emancipated? Probably never, considering human variables of greed and a lust for power.

But Bovee won't give up. Before the people are freed, he has another show. After the show, he'll pack up his guitar, harmonica and cowboy hat, load up his bus and go to Omaha, then to Idaho, Spokane, the San Diego Folk Festival.

The ghos's c fellow wobbler Joe Hill and Wood Guthrie will sit in the passenger seat, and Bovee will drive off into another electric night, speeding to keep ahead of the most fatal disease of all, disillusionment.

Separate bargaining gets OK

The faculty of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has the right to set up a collective bargaining unit separate from the Omaha campus, the State Supreme Court said Wednesday in a 4-3 decision.

The high court affirmed a Court of Industrial Relations ruling that allowed UNL faculty members to vote on whether they wanted the American Association of University Professors to become the exclusive bargaining agent in contract negotiations. The lower court ruling also allowed the Colleges of Law and Dentistry to set up separate bargaining agents.

The NU Board of Regents appealed that decision, saying that one bargaining unit should cover all campuses and colleges to prevent a "whip-saw effect" of negotiating contracts with different units.

The majority of the high court ruled that the Lincoln and Omaha campuses are separate entities with different by laws, faculty senates, committees and courses.

"Although the general skills of the university faculty are similar, the different missions and roles of each campus affect faculty interests and conditions of employment on each campus," said the majority opinion, written by Justice Donald Brodkey.

In arguing against the lower court's decision, Justice Harry Spencer wrote that allowing multiple bargaining units among the campuses would result in expensive fragmentation.

"In the long run, it results in an inefficient, ineffective and unworkable relationship for all parties concerned," Spencer said. He was joined by Chief Justice Paul White and Judge John Newton.

The high court also upheld a ruling that allows department chairmen to belong to the bargaining units. The Regents had argued that department heads were management, not labor and as such not proper personnel for collective bargaining.

"After reviewing the evidence on this issue, we believe that department chairmen do, except perhaps in extraordinary situations, act as a part of the faculty rather than part of the administration," the court held.

Department heads act in accordance with the wishes of their faculty, the court held, noting that chairmen who testified said they considered themselves faculty first and administrators second.

In the dissent, Spencer noted that a department chairmen may be responsive to the wishes of his faculty, but when a decision must be made, the chairman makes it.

"Historically, in the private sector, supervisors have been considered part of management," Spencer said.

Although the UNL faculty was given the right to set up its own bargaining unit late in 1975, it rejected the AAUP in February 1976 by 503 to 634 vote.

In other cases the Supreme Court:

—Affirmed the verdict of a Douglas County District Court in a 1976 divorce case involving June Baker and Ron Luebbe.

—Reversed and remanded for further proceedings a Scotts Bluff County District Court decision on a disputed estate involving Herman Jurgens, Everett Anderson and Paul Redding.

—Affirmed the Sandy County District Court finding Lawrence J. Sempek guilty of contempt of court.

—Affirmed the Scott County District Court decision awarding value parents' rights of Robert and Wendy Jenkins over their son.

More changes contemplated by Boys Town

Boys Town (AP) — Boys Town, just finishing a major transformation in the way it cares for underprivileged boys, is discussing other major changes, the Rev. Robert Hupp, Boys Town director, said.

They may include physical expansion, programs to handle more difficult type youths, a transition program for youths leaving the town's shelter, and even a "Girls Town" — live-in facilities for girls — Father Hupp said.

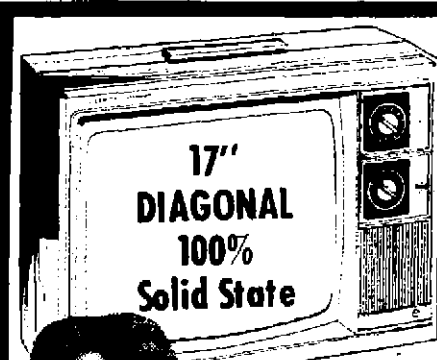

He says he plans to discuss possibilities for expansion with the board of directors in May. "To give them my thinking and to mention to them that I want their thinking on how we should expand."

Dear Abby

By Abigail
Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: If you hear from a woman in the Seattle area who claims that her husband is trying to kill her, don't pay any attention to her. She's my wife. She once took a bowl of oatmeal down to the corner drug store and asked the pharmacist to analyze it. She said it "tasted funny," and she was sure I had put roach powder on it. The pharmacist later told her it probably "tasted funny" because there was salt on it instead of sugar, but there was nothing wrong with it.

Another time she accused me of trying to run her down with my car. She has always been a little peculiar, but lately she is getting worse. In case something happens to her I don't want to get blamed. How can I stay in the clear?

LONGVIEW, WASH.
DEAR LONGVIEW: Even more important than your staying in the clear is getting help for your wife who is obviously mentally disturbed. Tell your doctor immediately what you've told me. And don't wait for "something" to happen. It might happen to you.

DEAR ABBY: In case there is no such thing as Fat Fannie Pantyhose, I have a suggestion for WELL-REARED IN RHODE ISLAND.

Buy maternity pantyhose, and wear it BACKWARDS! JEAN IN MONTEREY, MEXICO

DEAR JEAN: I have some good news for you and your well-reared sisters. Forget the maternity pantyhose. Some smart pantyhose manufacturer in Boston did indeed create the Fat Fanny Pantyhose, and if you're interested, send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I'll clue you in.

DEAR ABBY: My 30-year-old son, Rick, is my problem. He's had two unsuccessful marriages and a third one is now on the rocks.

His first wife keeps their two children which he supports. His second wife keeps the next two which he also supports. His third wife wasn't fit to raise dogs so the court awarded him custody of their 2½-year-old twin girls and a baby boy not quite a year old.

By the time Rick pays out all this support money he's too broke to hire help to care for the three youngest, so he's counting on me to help him.

I am 62, have rheumatoid arthritis, diabetes and high blood pressure. My husband is an invalid and can't work. What can I do? On top of all this Rick has a new girlfriend and she sure looks pregnant to me. What do you advise?

TIRED IN ST. JO
DEAR TIRED: Although your son appears to have made his own trouble (three broken marriages and seven children at age 30 is nothing to brag about), he should ask for court modification of his first two support agreements.

If Rick can obtain court relief on support of his first four children, leaving enough money to support the three he now has — that's it. If he cannot and doesn't have enough money for all of the children, a foster home (or homes) for the last batch is his only solution.

And in the obvious absence of SELF control, someone should tell Rick about BIRTH control.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069.

Foreign languages needlessly complicated by educators

San Francisco — Homework has a way of coming home. That's the trouble with it. Homework to the youngest scholar is "togetherness." We should do it together.

"What is the opposite of wealthy? That's the word I need to have."

I said, "The answer is income tax."

I'm pushing the idea that all our children should learn Chinese. There are more Chinese than anybody else. Therefore, the Chinese will take over the world.

Phrase books never seem to have what you want to say. I have a phrase book Japanese/English, but never found much useful.

"My pillow is too hard."

(Only none of my pillows was hard. Otherwise, the maid and I might have struck up an animated conversation.)

"Wash these and bring them back tonight." (But there was a sign on the room mirror: "Guest laundry takes two days.")

"If you attempt to improve life, you will create an equal number of problems."

That is somebody's law. Forget who. Maybe my law. (I have occasional days when profound sayings come tumbling out.)

Homework comes home in a red backpack. Worn by a boy puffing uphill on a yellow bike.

"Can I watch TV for just half an hour?"

Foggy mornings around Sinking Inn (To match the mood of the household.)

When I was doing time for the Board of Education, I was told that a preposition is not what you end a sentence with. I got a full course on "who" and "whom." (But my teenage mind was on "who's whose." Those were the days.)

"Most daily conversation is carried on in 500 words or less," says a bloke who studies such things.

"Hi."

"What's new?"

"Nothing much. How 'bout you?"

"Same old thing. Hear about Joe? Guy inna shipping department?"

"No. What happened?"

"Truck fell on him. Broke his leg."

"No kidding?"

As anyone (except educators) can see, this is about all you have to know. And you can learn that in no time. In Chinese. In Tagalog. English with a Plains, Ga., accent if you like.

In a small town in the north of France, I bought an English/French phrase book in a small shop near the beach. The elderly lady climbed on a chair and got it down.

"Formidable, M. Steu," she said. "Everything you wish to say."

At my hotel, I sat down to look up "laundry." The first phrase in the book was "Have you seen any strange soldiers around here? What color were their uniforms?"

Next phrase: "Are there any mine fields nearby?"

I said to the earnest scholar "Learn Chinese. Never mind the opposite of 'wealthy.' Open an American restaurant for Chinese and you will be wealthy."

"Did you ever see a Chinese restaurant that wasn't full?" Egg foo yong? Make it Eggs Benedict.

Funny money even funnier than Canadian

Great Falls, Mont. (AP) — This city is about 100 miles from the Canadian border, so employees at a shopping center and a supermarket didn't think much of it when two men said they would have to pay in Canadian currency — from "eastern Canada."

Police say one man went into the shopping center last weekend, picked up a pack of cigarettes and handed the clerk a "$25 bill." The store clerk, Pauline Lorang, said she used the normal discount rate for Canadian currency and gave $23.25 in change.

"It had the funny color of Canadian money," she said.

But there was a problem. Police say the currency had Cyrillic printing — the kind used in Russia and Eastern Europe, not eastern Canada.

Most bridge players spurn mathematical niceties — and in a way they are wise to do so. Mathematics seldom has enough bearing on the game to justify intensive study. But the probability of finding six cards in a suit divided 3-3 36 per cent of the time, and 4-2 48 percent of the time, should not be entirely ignored.

When you put these figures together, you find that a suit will be divided either 3-3 or 4-2 84 per cent of the time. You don't have to remember these percentages exactly, but it is decidedly helpful to know them in a general way.

One way, declarer is a 3-to-1 favorite, the other way, he is a 2-to-1 underdog. The proper choice is clear — if you know a thing or two about the odds.

Original records indispensable

Editor's note: This is the fourth of six articles on tracing the roots of your family

By Dick Pence

Of all the materials and sources available to the genealogist by far the most important are primary records or "original" records. These are the records found in archives, courthouses, town halls, old churches — or even in the attic.

The value of primary records is that they are contemporary to the event which they record. Thus they are more likely to be accurate than a record made some time later from memory.

In this section we will discuss some of the more important primary records, including especially those located at the National Archives.

Perhaps the most valuable primary records for the genealogist are federal and state census records. The United States government has conducted a census of the states every 10 years since 1790 and, in some states, other years.

Often the states themselves conducted off-year censuses. Your state library can tell you when these were.

The federal census records from 1790 through 1840 contain little genealogical information. Only the head of the household is given by name; all others in the family are counted only in specific age groups by sex. These records, though, can be helpful, for they tell you the number of children in the family and their approximate ages for instance.

Also, the early census records may help you find where your ancestor lived so you can pinpoint your searching.

The federal censuses for 1850, 1860, 1870 and 1880 provide much more information. Included are the names of each member of the household, their ages and places of birth (state, territory or foreign country), occupation, as well as value of real estate and personal property. The 1880 census provides additional important information: the place of birth of each individual's parents.

Also included with most of these censuses are mortality records giving the name and other information about each person who died within the last year. Some of the later schedules also tell you whether a person was married within the past year.

The 1890 census, unfortunately, was largely destroyed by fire in 1921, and only fragmentary parts of it are available for research. Because of the confidential nature of census records, the more recent ones are not available for research.

Only recently, however, the 1900 census has been opened to the public under certain conditions.

The National Archives and Records Service (Washington, D.C. 20408) has original or microfilm copies of all the federal census schedules that have been made available for public use. Anyone can search the microfilms upon obtaining a researcher's identification card (ask at the door where to apply).

If you can't get to Washington, there are other ways to search census records. Most state libraries have copies of the microfilm census records for their states and some local libraries also have these. Also — especially since the advent of the computer — more and more census records are being indexed.

Your state library — or the library of the state in which you are interested — will no doubt have copies of the indexes for its own state and probably will check these for you if you provide a specific name, which census you are interested in, and as much other detail as possible.

Searching Your Family Tree

The National Archives staff will, free of charge, search the census schedules and indexes it has for a specific name. Your request must be submitted on GSA Form 7029, "Order for Copies — Census Records" (available from the Archives). For schedules not indexed, a brief search for a particular name will be made in a given census record if the name of the individual and his state and county are provided.

In more populated counties, the name of the township is also needed, and in larger cities, the specific ward (your state library may have city directories or ward maps with this information).

When a requested entry is found, the Archives staff will send a photocopy of the census page on which it appears along with a bill for the cost of the reproduction (this charge is moderate). If the search is too extensive for the Archives staff to undertake, the cost of the microfilm roll on which the desired schedules are included will be sent to you.

All of the census records available at the Archives have been microfilmed and are available either in that form or in positive prints at a moderate cost. Upon request, the Archives will send you its publication, Federal Population Censuses 1790-1890, containing a roll listing and price for each roll.

The 1790 census — those parts available — was published by the government in the early 1900s and has since been privately reprinted. Published census schedules for 1790 are for Connecticut, Maine, Maryland, Rhode Island, South Carolina and Vermont.

The schedules for the remaining states — Delaware, Georgia, Kentucky, New Jersey, Tennessee and Virginia — were burned during the War of 1812. Substitute schedules, made from names in state censuses or tax lists, have been published for many of the missing states. These printed 1790 schedules are available in most larger libraries.

Another particularly helpful finding aid is an index to the 1880 census of the United States. Every family with a child under 10 years of age is included in this index, which is available on microfilm at the National Archives and many larger libraries.

If you know the state in which your ancestor lived (the index is by states) and are fairly certain that there were children under 10 in the family, then you'll want to check this index.

Unless you know the county in which an ancestor lived or unless the particular census you are interested in is indexed, it is almost impossible to find him or her readily in the census schedules. That's why it is so important for you to keep exact records of where your ancestors lived and when.

Another thing to keep in mind about census records is that they are not always completely accurate. This can happen for a number of reasons. The person providing the information to the census taker might not have known everyone's exact age.

And there has always been vanity about ages — I've noted cases where people aged only five years in the decade between two censuses.

Also, even though a particular record may have been published or someone copied it and sent it to you, you should try to check the original or a photocopy. Mistakes in interpreting the handwriting on the schedules or by the copier are easy to make.

The National Archives has many service records available, some dating as far back as 1775. The Archives will search these records in response to an inquiry on GSA Form 6751, "Order for Copies — Veterans Records."

Information on the form must be as complete as possible in order for an effective search.

Genealogical information on these records is generally limited to the individual himself, but usually includes his age, place of birth and information on his service.

In addition to records on members of the United States armed forces, the Archives has records for soldiers of the Confederate army.

Records of military or naval personnel that are not 75 years old are subject to restrictions on their use.

Some state archives or libraries have additional military records — or copies of the federal records — so you'll want to check there.

The Archives also has bounty land warrant application files based on service in wartime between 1775 and 1855 and pension application files based on service between 1775 and 1916.

Some states also had pension programs; inquiries about these should be directed to the state where the veteran lived after the war.

Information about veterans and their families varies greatly in the files at the National Archives. Generally, though, there usually is genealogical material as well as other information of value or interest.

For instance, the pension application file for one of my ancestors contained besides considerable family information, a first-person account of his experiences as an officer in the Revolutionary War. This was included in order to document the fact he was indeed a veteran.

Inquiries about pension and bounty land claims should also be submitted to the National Archives on GSA Form 6751, "Order for Copies — Veterans Records." If a file is found, documents that normally contain information of a personal nature about the veteran and his family will be selected, copied and sent along with a bill to the researcher.

The Archives will, on request, copy all reproducible papers in a file at a moderate cost per page.

The National Archives also has other records of interest to genealogists. Although incomplete, its immigration passenger lists and customs passenger lists can be of help. Requests for a search of these records should be made on Form 7111, "Order for Copies — Passenger Lists."

Details about these passenger lists and other National Archives records are contained in its leaflet, "Genealogical Records in the National Archives." Also available from the National Archives are three other helpful leaflets: "Genealogical Sources Outside the National Archives," "National Archives and Records Service Microfilm Publications," and "Military Service Records in the National Archives and Records Service."

All of these leaflets, free of charge, can be had by writing Publications Sales Branch (NATS), National Archives (GSA), Washington, D.C. 20408.

When writing, it's a good idea to request copies of the forms mentioned in this article.

Next: State and local records.

Veterans must apply soonest

New York — The plan just announced by the President to upgrade undesirable discharges is a financial blessing to tens of thousands of veterans and their families. If they qualify for the change in status, they will, for the first time, be eligible for veterans benefits.

The Veterans Administration has always divided "undesirables" into two categories — those who were discharged under circumstances that could be considered honorable and those whose conduct was dishonorable. Almost all undesirables are classified as dishonorable, which cuts them out of VA programs.

Now, they have a shot at qualifying for veterans benefits — provided they apply for an upgrade in their discharge within six months. This cannot be emphasized enough. After six months, the Pentagon will return to their old (and unforgiving) standard for judging discharges, which means the door to VA benefits will shut.

To find out if you're eligible for having your discharge upgraded, call this toll-free number: 800-325-4040. If you qualify, the government will send you the proper forms, which must be filled in and mailed to the discharge review board of the appropriate service. This program is not automatic. If you don't apply, you won't be upgraded.

Widows of vets who had undesirable discharges should

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant Quinn

also call. If they can get their husbands' discharges upgraded, they themselves may qualify for benefits.

Those eligible are servicemen with undesirable discharges who (1) served satisfactorily in Southeast Asia, (2) had a record of satisfactory service elsewhere for two years, (3) were wounded in action, (4) received a military decoration other than the Service Medal, (5) were honorably discharged from a previous tour of duty, (6) successfully completed alternative service under President Ford's clemency plan, or were excused from completion. Deserters now classified as fugitives may qualify if they turn themselves in to military control.

Here's a sampling of the veterans benefits available:

—Education. You get a free monthly allowance while in school, under the GI bill. Eligibility normally runs out after 10 years, but if your discharge has just been upgraded, the 10 years can start now. Spouses and children justify for education aid if the veteran died or was totally and permanently disabled as a result of service. In addition, the VA will pay extra benefits to help you finish high school, tutor you in difficult college courses, lend you up to $800 for schooling if you can't get a loan elsewhere, or provide a work/study program to help you get through school.

—Disability Compensation. This is for service-connected disabilities and is paid according to the seriousness of your problem. Payments are normally retroactive for no more than one year. In special cases, compensation may be paid for several years back.

—Pensions for Low-income Veterans. This applies to those 65 or older, or to younger people who are totally and permanently disabled for reasons not traceable to military service. It's based on need, and phases out for single veterans making more than $3,600 a year or veterans with dependents making more than $4,760 a year.

—Medical Benefits. The availability of free government care depends on a lot of things, like whether you're disabled, whether the illness was service-connected, how full the veterans hospital is, and your ability to pay. But if eligible, you can get a wide range of medical aid.

Popcorn stand out of business

Walla Walla, Wash. (AP) — Popcorn peddler Ben Cooper says he is going out of business.

"I'm not agonna buy a license and I'm agonna shut her down," said the 82-year-old proprietor of Ben's Popcorn Stand.

It's just something to take up my time and I'm not agonna pay the city $15 to entertain myself, said Cooper.

Cooper has operated his small booth off an alley for three years.

I give a lot of it to the kids coming by, he said. Usually the kids come back and give me the money.

Walla Walla's city licensing ordinance has just gone into effect.

Indictments involve alleged stolen goods

Omaha (UPI) — A federal grand jury Wednesday indicted the operator of a major Omaha electronics wholesaling firm on eight charges in connection with an alleged racketeering operation involving stolen property.

John Sutton, also known as Jack Sutton, faces six counts of receiving stolen property, one count of participating in racketeering, and one count of conspiracy to transport stolen property in interstate commerce and to dispose of it.

The government alleged that Sutton has 51% interest in SPS Sales Inc., which allegedly grossed $6 million in income last year.

If convicted on the racketeering charge, which carries a maximum penalty of $25,000 fine and 20 years imprisonment, Sutton would be subject to forfeiting his interest in SPS Sales to the federal government.

The grand jury also reindicted Tom Buffington of Omaha, on six counts of transporting stolen property in interstate commerce, and added the racketeering and disposing of stolen property counts to Buffington's original Feb. 9 indictment.

The grand jury alleged Buffington transported the stolen property to SPS Sales where Sutton allegedly disposed of it from Oct. 30, 1975, through Feb. 16, 1976.

Among the items allegedly stolen were fuzz busters, or radar detection devices placed on motor vehicles, watches, calculators and Indian jewelry. The government said the items had a value of at least $100,000.

Among the states where, the government alleged, the illegal transportation occurred were Ohio, Missouri, Minnesota, California, Kansas, Texas, New Mexico, Iowa and Nebraska.

The government requested the trial be in U.S. District Court in Omaha.

Don't sign blank Medicare forms

By Joanne Farris
DEAR JOANNE FARRIS: You asked readers about Medicare problems. I want to know why I should sign a Medicare report form and then leave it with my doctor. blank. He can put in anything he wants. Isn't there danger that he may pad it or make a mistake? Signed: E.L.O., Baltimore, Md.

ANSWER: Yes, and you are not the only reader who has raised this question.

Doctors ask patients to sign the Medicare forms and leave it so that their clerical helpers can fill it out later and mail it in. This is a convenience to the patient, but there are cases of abuse, and, of course, mistakes do happen.

For your own protection you should not sign any blank form. One doctor I know asks patients to sign the blank form and leave it with his nurse. She fills in the necessary information and then mails the form to the patient so he or she can read it over before forwarding it to Medicare.

Following this procedure the patient knows what's on the form and also when the form is mailed to Medicare, since he or she mails it.

I find it encouraging that people are speaking out about the abuses they see in some of the so-called normal business procedures.

The only way abuses will be eliminated or corrected is for people to refuse to stand for them.

DEAR JOANNE FARRIS: My grandsons have just left after a five-day stay with my wife and me. They are interesting fellows and we enjoyed their visit. Typically, with out-of-town guests, we took in a lot of the historic sights we haven't visited in years.

The only trouble with these young men (they're both college students) was that they ate at all hours and left things out in the kitchen, and their room was very messy from the moment they arrived until a few minutes before they left when they did take the sheets off the beds and put back the spreads. I refrained from criticizing them for fear of upsetting the appeacart since we were having such a nice time.

My wife says, "Forget it." I say they should be told so they will be neater next time. What do you think? Signed: L.B., South Boston.

ANSWER: I agree with your wife. Enjoy your grandsons. If you didn't have to pick up after them, why let such a little thing (relatively) interfere with an otherwise good time? You're lucky your grandsons wanted to spend their spring break with you and your wife, and I think you know it.

I will never forget a young woman I met on a plane. When she learned that I write a column on aging she said, "What can I do about my grandmother? She complains to my mother that I never come and see her, but when I have visited, all she did was criticize: 'My manners were awful. I had no taste in clothes, wasn't it too bad my brother got all the brains and looks, etc.'"

Sure I'm exaggerating, but I don't need to have my grandmother tell me I'm a worthless person, so I stay away.

'Water spurred Plains productivity'

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

G. Malcolm Lewis is a British geographer who has devoted years of study to the American Great Plains.

He will share part of his knowledge 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Sheldon Gallery to launch a Center for Great Plains Studies at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

In an interview Wednesday, Lewis said his interest in the Great Plains is unusual among British scholars and that his approach to the subject is unusual for a geographer. He has traced the history of the Great Plains concept from the earliest records of fur traders in the 1700s to the present.

The most important fact about the Great Plains today is that there is just barely enough water available for the things people want to do, he said. Any deviation (in moisture) creates a crisis.

But this marginality of water resources has spurred the development of some of the most advanced agricultural techniques in the world. The Great Plains has a lot to teach the rest of the world about getting the most food from the land, he noted.

The Indians had a clear idea of the Great Plains as a geographic region, he said. Fur traders made maps based on information mostly from Indians.

Lewis was the first to discover a map by fur trader Alexander Henry dated 1775 which contains the earliest recorded use of the term 'Great Plains' as it is used today.

His map was quite accurate in showing the eastern boundary of the region, Lewis said, even though it was not based on firsthand observation.

As America developed, the Great Plains came to be known as the Great American Desert. Then, when the railroad barons began to open the area to settlers, they put out lots of propaganda, Lewis said.

The railroads tried to give the region the image of a paradise with abundant water and mild climate. It took early settlers about 10 years to learn it is a land of extremes in weather, he said.

Lewis first became interested in the Great Plains while he was a student at the University of Wisconsin in the 1950s. He hitchhiked across the Plains and was surprised to find it is not flat as a tabletop, but has a varied terrain.

Lewis is a professor of the University of Sheffield, England, where he has taught courses in American geography.

The Center for Great Plains studies is intended to stimulate and encourage research, teaching and service activities related to the Great Plains. It will be financed by federal and private sources, according to Brian W. Blount, chairman of the geography department.

Executions view unclear

United Press International

Barbara Gaither, executive director of the Nebraska Civil Liberties Union, Wednesday acknowledged that Gov. J. James Exon had replied to an NCLU letter asking Exon for a statement on capital punishment.

"Unfortunately, your statement that your view on the death penalty is a matter of conscience does not yet give us specific reasons on which your position is based," Mrs. Gaither said in her letter to the governor.

A bill to abolish the death penalty in Nebraska is pending in the Unicameral.

In her letter, Mrs. Gaither said former Gov. Frank Morrison, a member of the Governors' Council Against Executions, indicated that he had discussed the death penalty issue with you in the past.

You had evidently expressed the opinion that you felt that the death penalty is a deterrent and would lower the rate of capital crimes in Nebraska, she said.

If this is not correct, please so inform us, but for the present, we will presume this information to be correct and respond to that argument, she said.

She said she learned of Exon's views on capital punishment during a conversation with Morrison.

South Platte Chamber opposes airport plan

Wilcox, AP — The South Platte United Chamber of Commerce has gone on record supporting McCook, Kearney and Hastings opposition to a regional designation for the airport at Grand Island.

The Civil Aeronautics Board has been asked to make the designation Frontier Airlines then would abandon service to McCook, Kearney and Hastings, consolidating at Grand Island.

Wayne Ziebart of Wilcox, South Platte Chamber vice president, said no vote was taken at a meeting in Wilcox concerning financial support of the opposition.

However, he said, members decided that if financial aid is necessary, they will discuss it at the group's next meeting.

Lincolnite to get palsy award

Tammie Coalson, 17, has been named to receive the national United Cerebral Palsy Award of Concerned Youth for Cerebral Palsy.

The award will be presented April 23 at the United Cerebral Palsy of America annual conference in Washington.

Miss Coalson has worked for the annual cerebral palsy fund raising telethons in Nebraska since she was 12 years old.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Coalson of Lincoln.

Citizen planners identify needs

By Vince Boucher
Star Staff Writer

The beginnings of a three-year course of action for Lincoln Action Program were charted Wednesday night by a group of people who weren't professionals planners.

More than 60 people from throughout the community, ranging in age from very young to elderly, identified areas in which Lincoln is lacking.

After they finished, LAP Board Chairman Dixie DeCouteau reminded them, "You, the people in the community, are the advisors for the board. If we aren't doing what you want, you have a right to let us know."

They had assembled in six smaller groups and everyone was polled about what they would like to see in Lincoln, about where the city could help them, about what needs were still unmet.

The most frequent need expressed when they reassembled was housing — affordable housing and improvements and help with winterization, utilities and financing.

Transportation was also stressed as a problem area, especially relating to rural residents and disabled persons.

"There are rural problems that Lincoln can't relate to. LAP should look closely into creating a rural component to deal with those problems," said one rural resident speaking for his group.

Another said that even with the programs already provided by community agencies like LAP for the old and disabled, many don't have transportation or aren't aware of available transportation.

Children who had been brought to the meeting gathered in their own group and presented a list of priorities.

Their list included more neighborhood grocery stores; a recreation center for children and old people that would provide bingo, soccer, card-playing and dancing; less pollution; transportation to city recreation centers; special days for kids and teens and more parks.

LAP Planning Director Neva Forbes told the participants that the goals they set would be raw material for planners and administrators to work with, providing direction for up to three years.

Goals and ideas decided by the six groups included:

- Group 1: Home improvements, child concerns and more cultural activities.
- Group 2: Housing, transportation, especially rural, and health service information and transportation.
- Group 3: Housing, youth programs and development of a Hispanic cultural center.
- Group 4: Transportation, recreation and home concerns.
- Group 5: Health services, elderly services, Hispanic services and more services for Air Park residents.
- Group 6: Hispanic center, transportation and health services.

Comedian-pianist Borge sticks to 'family' comedy

By Joe Hudson
Star Staff Writer

Pianist-comic Victor Borge considers himself unique. While many comedians shock audiences with provocative material, the 68-year-old Danish immigrant still sticks to a routine that delights the entire family.

And he says he's never considered changing his act.

"Any time you are forced to compromise, you have to have a bad conscience," Borge said in his dressing room between acts at his Wednesday night concert at Pershing Auditorium.

Judging from the reaction of the 6,000-plus persons who attended the Lincoln Community Concert-sponsored performance, his followers are happy Borge has done little or no compromising throughout his career.

"The people who come are those who know me and know what to expect, and they get what they expect," said Borge, who fled Nazi-occupied Denmark in 1940 and came to America almost penniless.

Borge, his voice bearing the heavy accent of his homeland, said he does about 150 shows a year, many of them in western Europe. He voiced no plans for retirement.

"But then, I had plans for retirement when I was 22," he mused, sipping a can of diet soda.

He said it would take "a whole book" to explain his evolution from child piano prodigy to musician-humorist.

"It's a natural development of me. Offstage and onstage I do a very natural reaction to life in general. That's what I'm bringing to the stage. Nothing is put on."

Borge, who drove from a Tuesday performance in North Platte, stops next in Austin, Texas. The trip from North Platte included a stop at Broken Bow, where his wife's relatives live.

There still is plenty of room for family-oriented comedy acts to succeed, he said. Someday, such an act could fill the shoes of Borge, whose hijinks at the piano earned him the Funniest Man in Music award in 1951 and Comedian of the Year three years later.

"If he's good, he's good," Borge explained. "The only place you can excel without talent is on TV. Just because you're a success on TV doesn't mean you have talent."

And for that reason, Borge said he relishes the thrill of a live performance.

"I've never done a dead one... yet."

Survey finds more children have shots

United Press International

A survey of day-care centers by the Nebraska Health Department indicates immunization levels among pre-schoolers apparently improved in the last year.

Christine Morley, public health nurse with the department's immunization program, said the survey indicated a larger percentage of pre-schoolers have had shots, although immunization levels still lagged behind those of school-age children.

Ms. Morley cautioned that the number of centers participating in the survey this year was down, so the figures may not be totally comparable.

Diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough immunizations went from 75% up to 80%; polio immunization went from 73% to 83%; measles protection went from 73% up to 84%; and the number of children protected against rubella or three-day measles went from 70% up to 83%.

Schools given incentive to claim parking money

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

The Unicameral Wednesday amended pending school aid legislation to pressure schools into demanding revenue from parking meter fines which senators say is constitutionally theirs.

On a 25-21 vote, the lawmakers accepted a proposal by Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh to count parking meter fine collections as receipts in the school aid formula whether they receive them or not.

The amendment will serve as an incentive for schools to demand the money since it will count against their state aid allocation even if they don't receive it, DeCamp said.

Now the senator said, cities are defying the constitution by using parking meter fine collections for their own purposes.

That results in larger school aid allocations for city school districts, while denying outstate districts larger allotments which would be freed by the infusion of such fines into city school district budgets, he said.

"A hustle," DeCamp described it.

Sen. Pat Venditte of Omaha provided the climactic required 25th vote to adopt the amendment to LB33, the bill to increase state aid by $20 million in the coming school year.

Sponsors of the measure opposed the amendment.

DeCamp should, pursue his proposition with legal action rather than by writing it into school aid legislation, Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue said.

Sen. Neil Simon of Omaha said parking meters are established by city government, and any fines from them should be utilized by the city as it wishes.

DeCamp said the constitution clearly provides that such fines go to the schools.

State aid to school districts in cities which don't funnel such revenue to the schools is greater without those collections, DeCamp argued.

"We want our share of that (state aid) money outstate," he declared.

DeCamp said cities have "stolen" between $5 million and $7 million from the schools by keeping most of the fines.

LB33 remained at first stage floor consideration after its fourth day of limited debate.

Here is the vote on DeCamp's amendment:

For: Bereuter, Burrows, Carsten, Chambers, Clark, Curran, DeCamp, Duis, Dworak, Hasebrook, Heller, Kahle, Kelly, Kremer, Lamb, R. Lewis, Marsh, Marvel, Mills, Murphy, Nichol, Rasmussen, Rummey, Schmitz, Venditte.

Against: Barnett, Boughn, Brennan, Cope, Frazier, Fowler, George, Goodrich, Keyes, Koch, Leach, F. Lewis, Mars, Maxey, Movian, Newell, Reuzel, Savage, Simon, Soney, Warner.

Absent: Lucike, Merz, Swigart.

Amendment requires licenses for private alarm inspectors

Associated Press

State senators added an amendment to the proposed criminal code Wednesday that would require certification and licensing of private fire alarm system inspectors.

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln proposed the amendment to LB38, which he said was presented to him by the state fire marshal.

He said the marshal told him that some unqualified inspectors may be making home inspections.

The amendment was adopted 26-1.

Sens. John Murphy of South Sioux City and Gerald Koch of Ralston proposed amendments designed to toughen penalties for carrying a deadly weapon in the commission of a crime, but they differed in approach.

Murphy wanted a minimum five-year sentence, with no parole, for using a weapon in commission of a crime. The code revision includes a 1-20 year sentence.

Koch wanted to require consecutive sentences, one sentence for the crime and one for carrying the weapon, concealed or not.

Omaha Sen. Neil Simon advised the senators that good time laws should be specifically revoked in Murphy's amendment to clarify that the five-year sentence would indeed be five years.

Neligh Sen. John DeCamp advised against tampering at all with the good time laws, which determine time off of a sentence for good behavior. He suggested that reductions in sentences earned by prisoners for good behavior are necessary and "make it possible to run a penitentiary without everybody being an animal all the time."

He warned of walkouts by penal personnel without the good time incentive for prisoners.

Utica Sen. Douglas Bereuter agreed: he has been pushing for more determinate sentencing, but suggested making the penalties more severe while retaining the good time provisions.

Murphy asked to delay further consideration of the issue until the common ground could be found.

"I'd like to form one of those ad hoc committees," for that purpose, Murphy said.

He referred to an informal gathering of senators who in the past have met to discuss the criminal code and recommend amendments.

The amendments were laid over for later consideration.

Jail term opinion is clarified

Associated Press

If the Legislature wants to make sure that those convicted of first-degree murder serve a definite number of years in jail, it will have to restrict time off for good behavior that such a convict can receive, the State Justice Department said Wednesday.

The department issued a clarification of an opinion given to Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers that said the Legislature could restrict parole for capital offenders.

Chambers' LB64 abolishes capital punishment and includes an amendment requiring a 30-year sentence with no parole.

Chambers asked if a 45-year sentence with a requirement that the offender serve two-thirds of the time would guarantee 30 years in prison.

The opinion said it would guarantee no parole for 30 years but the clarification said it would not guarantee that the mandatory discharge date could not be earlier than 30 years unless good time laws were restricted.

Anti-litter bill beats kill attempt

United Press International

A bill that would allow a judge to order convicted litterers to pick up trash in lieu of going to jail or being fined withstood a kill attempt in the Legislature Wednesday.

LB114 was introduced by Omaha Sen. Larry Stoney, who said it might be the most effective anti-litter legislation sponsored this session.

But Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers, who made the kill motion, described the proposal as "abusive legislation aimed at the children."

He cautioned his colleagues to consider the impact it would have on young persons, adding he was positive the penalty would not be imposed on adults as a general rule, especially those in the professional category.

Another opponent was Bellevue Sen. Frank Lewis, who said a similar proposal two years ago was thrown out based on "peace officers" because they did not wish to have the added responsibilities of picking up trash.

The bill would allow a judge to order convicted litterers to pick up trash in lieu of going to jail or being fined withstood a kill attempt in the Legislature Wednesday.

Liquor licensees' bill clears first floor test

A bill to remove the prohibition against campaign contributions by liquor licensees cleared its first floor test in the Legislature Wednesday.

The proposal to wipe out the restriction first adopted in 1935 was advanced on a 25-8 vote.

Sen. Glenn Goodrich of Omaha, author of LB93, said the prohibition has prevented liquor licensees from contributing to past constitutional amendment campaigns to increase legislative salaries.

That should be an argument for the current law and against Goodrich's bill, Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha said.

The Legislature should not try to "get the liquor industry to help senators get a pay raise," Chambers said.

In exchange, the industry would then be freed to raise funds to assist political candidates willing to help deregulate its operations, he said.

Goodrich said the current prohibition is probably unconstitutional anyway.

Bill to finance enforcement of parking restrictions passed

The Legislature passed a bill Wednesday on funding the enforcement of vehicle parking restrictions in most Nebraska cities.

The bill, Grand Island Sen. Ralph Kelly's LB274, won 40-2 final passage from Unicameral members.

The legislation adds Lincoln to the cities affected — those of first and second class status — and allows use of business license and occupation tax receipts to pay costs of administering the enforcement of parking restrictions on city streets.

The bill also spells out in statutory language the constitutional requirement that fines from parking violations go to school districts rather than the cities.

NU student elected governor of Bar Association division

Nancy Roberts of Lincoln has been elected governor for the 1977-78 school year of the 8th Circuit of the Law Student Division of the American Bar Association.

The Law Student Division, a national law student organization affiliated with the American Bar Association, has members in over 120 law schools. It is primarily a service organization to law students, offering placement assistance and workshops on various law topics.

Ms. Roberts is a junior law student in the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Law. She will represent students from 13 law schools located in the five-state region encompassed by the 8th Circuit.

Plastic surgery bill moved

Associated Press

A bill to allow workmen's compensation coverage of plastic surgery for injuries suffered on the job was heard and advanced Wednesday by the Legislature's Business and Labor Committee.

Omaha Sen. Bill Brennan's LB529 was advanced with no dissenting votes.

The bill was amended to restrict coverage to surgery for correction of injuries, and exclude purely cosmetic surgery.

The bill also covers damages to artificial limbs, eyeglasses, dentures and hearing aids, but the latter three only in case of accompanying personal injury.

The committee heard and held another bill, LB525, that would require the governor to approve any state employees' union contracts. Those contracts now are approved by legislative resolution.

Sen. Orval Keyes of Springfield, chairman of the sponsoring Revenue Committee, said there is no reason the Legislature should have anything to do with the contracts because they are negotiated by the executive departments and the unions.

Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City supported that view and noted that in any case, the Appropriations Committee has power of approval over the agreements through the budgeting process.

Bills Introduced

Associated Press

Bills introduced Wednesday in the Nebraska Legislature:

LB524 — Provides methods for the State Roads Department in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Transportation to require signs, barriers and road attractions. Banking and Commerce Committee.

LB535 — Delegates Labor Board membership to employment agencies that change employers rather than employees. Business and Labor Committee.

Kearney trail decision postponed

Associated Press

The Legislature decided Wednesday to postpone for at least two days consideration of a resolution that would allow the Game and Parks Commission to ultimately acquire 1.8 miles of railroad right of way in Buffalo County for a bike and hiking trail.

The resolution, sponsored by Kearney Sens. Martin Kahle and Ron Cope, found solid support among other legislators, but some of that support hinged on whether the resolution would be subject to a public hearing.

Kahle and Cope said the Ft. Kearney Preservation Society was purchasing the land from the Burlington Northern Railroad for $10,000, and plans to turn it over to the Game and Parks Commission.

A bill scheduled for public hearing Thursday, LB327, would accomplish the same thing as the resolution if the bill ultimately were passed by the Unicameral.

However, Kahle and Cope said time was a critical factor and that the resolution would allow the land to be acquired faster, since it would require only one vote of the body.

An initial motion by Utica Sen. Douglas Bereuter to send the resolution to a committee for hearing failed on a 13-20 vote. Bereuter and Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett said they favored the program itself, but said lawmakers could set an undesired precedent by allowing the Game and Parks Commission to acquire land outside regular statutory procedures.

Big Springs Sen. Jack Mills said he hoped for a motion to reconsider the Bereuter request. At that point, Kahle asked for and received unanimous consent to bracket the resolution until Friday.

Mills, Bereuter and Columbus Sen. Donald Dworak each made reference to previous bills that would have allowed the Game and Parks Commission to acquire railroad right of way without permission of the legislature. Such bills have been killed in the past.

No-fault insurance is dead in its tracks

(c) Chicago Daily News

Washington — No-fault auto insurance, one of the glamorous consumer reforms of recent years, has been stopped dead in its tracks.

During no-fault heyday between 1970 and 1975, 24 states initiated the reform to one degree or another. But last year no state climbed aboard the no-fault bandwagon and the U.S. Senate narrowly defeated an effort to impose a federal no-fault law.

The reasons for the slow-down are several. The ineffectiveness of a number of the state laws, vehement opposition to no-fault from trial lawyers who stand to lose $1 billion a year in accident litigation fees, and contradictory statistical findings on cost savings from no-fault.

The purpose of no-fault is to guarantee that persons injured in auto mishaps receive prompt payment for their medical expenses and wage losses.

Under the old liability system, an injured person had to prove the other driver at fault and himself free from fault or comparatively so before collecting damages.

Under no-fault, the injured person collects from his own insurance company. In return, he is supposed to give up most of his rights to sue for damages including notorious pain-and-suffering claims.

In theory, then, money saved from reducing litigation more than balances the cost of guaranteeing medical and wage benefits to injured persons. That is supposed to lower, or at least stabilize, insurance costs.

But only one of the 24 no-fault states, Michigan, has effectively limited litigation. There a fault-based claim cannot be filed except in cases of death, serious disfigurement and serious impairment of bodily function.

In 15 states, pain and suffering claims can be filed after medical expenses exceed a threshold as low as $200.

In eight other states, no-fault benefits have been added to existing liability coverage, but no curb has been placed on pain-and-suffering suits. Motorists in those states are required, in effect, to carry double coverage at substantially increased cost.

Trial lawyers are generally credited with thwarting passage of Michigan-style no-fault laws. They have convinced their fellow lawyers, who often dominate state legislatures as well as Congress, that damage suits should be allowed.

The resultant low thresholds for suit encourage "victims, their attorneys, and doctors to inflate otherwise small claims so as to reach the thresholds which allows them to go to court and sue for pain and suffering," said Kathleen F. O'Reilly, executive director of the Consumer Federation of America.

Consequently, low thresholds accomplish very little in reducing litigation and administrative expenses, she said. "Many of the logical good benefits which flow from no-fault are thus destroyed."

One of those benefits is supposed to be lower insurance rates. But it is not clear whether that has happened.

Insurance companies that support no-fault produce reports that savings have gone down under no-fault, despite soaring medical and auto-part costs. Insurance companies that oppose no-fault issue actuarial reports saying the opposite.

Jeffrey O'Connell, a University of Illinois law professor and an early no-fault proponent, surveyed all those studies in a recent law-review article.

His conclusion: "There seems to be considerable evidence that all things considered, no-fault has not only not increased auto insurance costs, but has in fact decreased them, just as was originally promised, despite the inadequacy of the laws passed."

NFO starts cow sell-off

Corning, Iowa (UPI) — Members of the National Farmers Organization have begun sell-offs of dairy and beef cows as a protest against low prices for milk and beef cattle, officials said Wednesday.

The sell-offs, which began Monday, were being held at more than 200 NFO livestock marketing facilities across the nation.

Ed Graf, director of the group's dairy department, said all NFO dairy producers were being encouraged to take advantage of this coordinated cow sell-off. He said the industry has used figures to hold down milk prices to a level which is economically running many dairymen "because 1976 milk production in the U.S. was increased over 1975." Officials said the future of the American cattle industry is even dimmer with cow-calf men losing as much as $150 a head on their 500-pound choice steers. Cattle feeders need an additional $280 on 1,000-pound slaughter steers in order to pay cowmen and still clear a profit, officials said.

Ice cream labeling rules issued by federal agency

Washington (UPI) — Get ready for peach ice cream, peach flavored ice cream and artificial peach ice cream.

The Food and Drug Administration has issued new labeling rules to help consumers know just what they're buying when they shop for ice cream.

The FDA said the new rules would require that ice cream makers list the natural and artificial flavors used in their products. If an artificial flavor is used, but the name of the natural flavor is not, the label must say "artificially flavored."

As of June 13, ice cream makers may begin using the labeling and as of July 1, 1979, the regulations will become mandatory.

The rules also cover sherbet and soft-serve ice cream and define the difference between ice cream and frozen custard.

Picking a dog

Summertime is a good time for families, hunters or just plain animal lovers to pick a dog for a family pet.

I use the words family pet because even a kenneled hunting dog is some sort of family pet. If it isn't, you shouldn't have the dog.

Picking the right dog, what with breed, temperament, size, and other desired qualities, is a wide ranging question each buyer should take into consideration well before the actual exchange of money for the animal.

For instance, big dogs don't always make good house dogs. Little dogs aren't always good with children (small children especially). Long-haired dogs often shed to a point of being a pain on the owner.

The considerations can go on and on. So how do you pick the dog with all the characteristics you desire? Read dog manuals on breeds for starters. Also, check with owners of those breeds, talk to pet shops, professional kennels, dog care shops, veterinarians and anyone you think can help you.

Weight the pluses and minuses. Each breed will have both. Make sure the family is in agreement. Nothing is worse than making the choice and finding your wife is allergic to or just plain hates the type of dog you picked.

You also don't want an energetic breed if you're a lazy-type who enjoys curling up with a newspaper. But if your kids are rambunctious, an energetic dog could be important.

As we mentioned, the long-haired dogs also shed. That short, bristly hair may be even tougher to get off carpet and upholstery.

Male or female

Then there's male or female, puppy or full grown and color preference.

Recent books that might help you choose, according to a New York Times article, include "The Pocket Encyclopedia of Dogs in Color," by Ivan Swedrup, MacMillan Press, "Choosing the Right Dog, A Buyer's Guide to all 121 Breeds," by John Howe, Harper and Row, "All About Small Dogs in the Big City," by Ann Seranne, Coward, McCann and Beoghegan, and "The Uncommon Dog Breeds," by Kathryn Braund, Arco.

Those are a few titles worth looking up. Here are some tips for the prospective dog hunters in our area. Favorites are pointers, setters, spaniels and retrievers along the following lines.

Pointers — English pointers are big running dogs used primarily on quail, some pheasant hunting also. They aren't always good with youngsters because they are high strung dogs and can be a little strong-headed. Vizsla's are an upcoming breed with not quite the range and a little milder temperament. It's a better dog for training and with kids than the English pointers.

Setters — English setters hold edge over Irish or red setters. They are mild tempered, hard working and better family dogs. With both breeds, good field stock are quail specialists with talent for pheasants. However, long hair, as opposed to pointer's short hair, can be a time consuming affair cleaning after a hunt.

Spaniels — Brittanies are superb little dogs, small-sized, and good-tempered, easily trained and have a desire to please that makes them very adaptable house dogs as well as top field dogs. Springer spaniels are most forgotten when it comes to hunting but are good flushing-type dogs. Both are good dogs for pheasant. Brittanies are best for quail.

Retrievers — Labradors are perhaps the best overall dog for the hunter who likes everything — ducks to pheasants and quail. They are big and strong dogs with short hair, great temperament and are easily trained once they know you mean business. Labs are quite adaptable as house dogs as well. Golden retriever is best of temperament in dogs. Great with kids, easier to train than Labs, but long hair again can be a problem in some Nebraska areas or in the house.

Of course these comments are generalities. There are individual dogs which will put generalities to shame, but as guidelines go, it's a start. Read and shop around for the best dog for you and your family. Years down the road you may be very happy you did.

Peru coach seeks damages

A Peru State College coach who was suspended in February filed suit Wednesday in Federal District Court in Lincoln asking for $10,000 in damages and a court order to put him back on the job.

In his lawsuit, Jack Schammarhorn, former wrestling and assistant football coach said he was suspended without notice on Feb. 17 by Athletic Director Jerry Joy But, according to state law, the suit said, only the school's president has the power to suspend faculty.

Dr. Douglas Pearson, college president, has refused to reinstate Schammarhorn, the suit said.

A hearing on a temporary restraining order will be held Thursday before U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom.

NU gals set for net meet

The University of Nebraska will host the 1977 Women's Big Eight Tennis Championships this Friday and Saturday. Defending champion Oklahoma and six other Big Eight teams will compete for the title. Colorado will not send a team. Titles will be awarded to the top singles players in six flights and to the top doubles teams in three divisions. Nebraska coach Sig Garnett said Kansas, Oklahoma State and the Huskers should be the teams in contention for the championship.

"Oklahoma lost its number one player and Kansas and Oklahoma State have really done well," said Garnett, whose team is 9-2, and 2-0 in Big Eight play, defeating both Iowa State and Kansas State.

The meet begins Friday at Harper, Schramm, Smith Courts. First round semifinals and consolation singles will start at 9 a.m. First round doubles play begins at 3:30 p.m. on the same courts. Finals are slated for Saturday at the NU Varsity Courts.

NU's Joyce McVicker, the #1 singles player, and freshman Sue Sloboth, who will play in the 2nd flight, will team up as the top NU doubles team.

UNO spring game moved

Omaha (AP) — The University of Nebraska-Omaha's spring practice football game has been moved to April 22 to avoid conflict with the Omaha royals opening home game. Coach Bill Danenhauer said Wednesday.

Danenhauer said the opposing red and white squads would be selected by seniors to add to the interest.

Thone says he hasn't decided political future

Associated Press

Rep. Charles Thone said Wednesday he has not made any final decision about his political future, but acknowledged he is "looking very hard at the governor's race."

Thone commented in an interview late Wednesday night after being informed of remarks attributed to Omaha Mayor Bob Cunningham. The mayor said Thone told him he would run for governor.

"I'm looking at it hard and it is one of my options, as I have said before. I have not signed the bottom line on it and I don't intend to in the near future," Thone said.

Thone acknowledged he had talked with Cunningham but said, "as I recall it, our conversation, I told him I have been giving serious consideration to running for governor."

"No final decision has been made, but, of course, I am considering the governor's race among four options," the 1st District Republican said.

Thone is serving his fourth term in the House. He previously has said his options include running for governor, seeking another House term, running for the U.S. Senate or initiating a law practice in Lincoln.

Robert Phares, former North Platte mayor, and Nebraska Wesleyan University President Vance Rogers have announced they will seek the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

Gov. J. J. Exon, a Democrat, will complete his second term next year and by law cannot run again.

Lt. Gov. Gerald W. Helms is expected to seek the Democratic nomination for governor.

Will Western Union call you?

Minneapolis (UPI) — Should a juggler on a unicycle drop in and sing you a song to make the blues go away, be not dismayed. It's Western Union calling.

Western Union is the brainchild of two young women who stepped into the void left when Western Union discontinued the singing telegram.

They use assumed names — Elizabeth Everett and Troyanne Taylor — so their regular jobs won't be jeopardized. But that probably won't be a factor much longer.

"We've got so many calls that, well, we haven't had to quit our jobs yet, but we've had to take some time off," said Ms. Taylor.

"The idea came over lunch," Ms. Taylor said. "And frankly, we just don't know what to make of the response. It's been overwhelming. We decided at lunch we'd go by the seat of our pants. Now, I guess we'll need some new ones."

Government, production vex dairymen

Omaha (AP) — Mid-America Dairymen Inc., despite a banner year in 1976, is still concerned by the problem of overproduction and the current government climate.

The two areas kept cropping up during Mid-Am's annual meeting here Tuesday.

"While we won a few in 1976, we must keep up a constant vigil because government has not gone away," Mid-Am President William Powell of Princeton, Mo., told some 900 dairymen. "It still makes decisions, issues proclamations and publishes reports."

Powell cited two government reports "which could be devastating" to the industry: —A General Accounting Office report indicating the price support program and import quotas are not in the best interests of the country.

—A report of the antitrust division of the U.S. Justice Department questioning federal milk orders, dairy cooperatives and some marketing regulations the dairy industry developed to protect the pricing system of milk.

"If the Justice Department's recommendations were implemented, our ability to collectively market and bargain for prices would be greatly diminished," Powell said.

Woman pleads guilty to manslaughter

Omaha (AP) — One of two mothers whose unattended preschool-aged children died in a fire at their home Jan. 31 has pleaded guilty to two charges of manslaughter.

Lois Pittman, 21, whose two sons, ages four and 17 months died in the fire, pleaded guilty before District Court Judge

John Clark, according to the Douglas County attorney's office.

Mrs. Pittman's sons and the two children of Cathleen Hawkins, ages 4 and 14 months, died when overcome by smoke at the North Omaha home where the two families lived.

Both women said in their initial court appearance they had left the house at 11:30 a.m. the day of the fire. The fire was reported about 1:40 p.m. and the two returned about 2:30 p.m., police said.

Each was charged with four counts of manslaughter. The county attorney's office said it agreed to a plea bargain for Mrs. Pittman. Two of the manslaughter charges will be dropped now that she has pleaded guilty to the other two.

The four charges against Mrs. Hawkins are still pending. Sentencing of Mrs. Pittman was delayed.

Exemption is granted to hospital

Papillion (AP) — The Midlands Community Hospital professional building was granted a local tax exemption Tuesday despite protests of some Sarpy County officials.

However, the exemption may be temporary. The Sarpy County Board action was for a one-year period while the building is being completed. One doctor already has moved into the structure near the hospital south of Papillion.

Sarpy County Assessor Albin Dvorak had asked that the building be put on the tax rolls for about $600,000. County Atty. Patrick Kelly cited state law that if any portion of a building is rented commercially, it should be taxed.

Wendell Kronberg representing the hospital board, said the building is "almost a necessity" to the hospital. With its finances shaky, operation of the hospital was taken over by receivers several months ago.

Commissioner William V. Brooks moved that the exemption be granted for one year "to help that hospital fly."

Taxation of the building could cost the hospital about $20,000 to $25,000 a year.

To My Fellow Citizens of Lincoln:

Thank you!

Your strong support in the recent primary election was most encouraging. The vote which you cast on my behalf shows that you want City Council representation that is experienced, qualified and can use common sense.

I will continue to campaign vigorously so that all Lincoln voters will have the opportunity to know of my past governmental experience, present viewpoints of important issues and future municipal goals and programs.

As we move toward the important general election on May 3, I will need and greatly appreciate your continued support. We can win and I want you on our team.

If you wish to help further, please call 477-2327, 464-1428 or 466-9838.

Closing prices on N.Y. stocks

New York (AP) — Reassurances from Washington that President Carter had no plans for price controls helped the stock market recover from a mid-day loss and post its fourth straight gain Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks down about 7 points at noon time was up 1.02 at 938.18 by the close.

In the last four sessions the average has risen 23.45 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about a 4-3 spread among New York Stock Exchange listed issues.

The rally that led to the Dow's best showing of the year on Tuesday, a 13.06 point jump, appeared to have lost its momentum in early trading Wednesday.

But the market came back to life after Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal asserted that the President would call for no direct or standby price-control measures in his forthcoming anti-inflation message.

Despite similar statements from the Carter administration in the past fears of restrictive price measures have been voiced frequently in the financial world of late.

Analysts said they were impressed with the market's strength in the face of some adverse news affecting International Business Machines, the No. 1 holding of investing institutions.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 4 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 4, add 2. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Outbursts halt drug case trial

Omaha (UPI) — A defendant in a heroin trial underway in U.S. District Court Wednesday swore at the government's chief witness and said Judge Albert Schatz ran a "kangaroo court" and then was ordered removed from the courtroom.

The outburst by Faustino "Mexican Frank" Selvera, 47, came shortly after former heroin dealer Ike Conway began testifying.

Although Conway made no mention of Selvera at the time, Selvera called Conway a "stupid, black SOB" and referred to the proceedings as a "kangaroo court."

"Lock me up... I can't listen to that... take me to a cell," Selvera said.

Schatz ordered Selvera removed from the courtroom by U.S. marshals, who took Selvera to the marshal's office, a floor below Schatz's courtroom. Selvera returned to the courtroom about an hour later. He approached the bench and conferred briefly with Schatz after re-entering.

Selvera and two others accused of being heroin dealers and former Omaha police officer Leonard Smith are on trial for alleged activities conducted during the time Conway ran a major North Omaha heroin operation.

Smith is accused of taking money from heroin dealers in exchange for information on police narcotics operations.

Selvera interrupted the trial on two occasions Tuesday with caustic remarks and was cautioned by Schatz against repeating his interruptions Tuesday and again Wednesday when Schatz resumed the trial.

Selvera's attorney, S.J. Albracht, apologized to the jury for his clients' behavior, calling Selvera's remarks "terrible and cantankerous."

"There are people who lack the same respect for this court that I have," Albracht said.

Schatz instructed the jurors to disregard Selvera's behavior when the jurors begin deliberating on their verdict.

A government spokesman said Selvera's behavior during the afternoon session Wednesday was "relatively docile."

Omaha man charged in shooting of meat packing trucks

Omaha (AP) — Michael F. Becic, 26, of Omaha was arrested Wednesday afternoon on a charge of being a fugitive from justice in connection with shooting incidents involving two meat packing company trucks.

Becic is charged in Pottawattamie County, Iowa, with assault with intent to commit murder in the incidents involving two Dubuque Packing Co. trucks.

He was arrested at the packing company in Omaha.

Omaha police said Becic is to appear in Municipal Court Thursday afternoon for bond setting and to determine if he is willing to be returned to Iowa.

The Dubuque Packing Co. has been operating in the Omaha plant which has been picketed since late last year by members of Local 730 of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America.

P. M. Carr, assistant Pottawattamie County attorney, said Becic was identified by truck drivers Orville Slechta and John Kotz, both of Denison, Iowa.

Carr quoted the drivers as saying they had seen Becic on the picket line at the plant entrance, but a union representative said he could not confirm that Becic was a member of the union.

Slechta told police three shotgun blasts were fired from a car at his eastbound semi-trailer truck Tuesday morning as it crossed the Interstate 480 bridge and neared the I-29 northbound exit. He said pellets struck the cab of the truck.

Kotz said four rifle shots were fired at a truck he was driving east on I-80-29 between the Spring Street Bridge and the South 24th Street interchange in Iowa.

Settlement reached in alleged Bluffs police abuse

Council Bluffs, Iowa (UPI) — The city of Council Bluffs has agreed to pay $4,833.34 to three Nebraskans who alleged they were mistreated by Bluffs police.

A spokesman for the city attorney's office said Wednesday Gregory Umatum, 22, Omaha, agreed to settle for $2,500; and Roger Shirk, 22, Gretna, and Randy White, 22, Omaha, each accepted $1,166.67.

Umatum sought $3,750 while the others filed for $1,750 each.

The case was scheduled for trial this week, but Monday the city council approved the out-of-court settlement.

The spokesman said the case involved the arrest of Umatum in June 1974 for two traffic violations and resisting arrest. His companions were arrested for disturbing the peace.

The men contended they were physically and verbally abused in a police cruiser on the way to the police station.
